

Mrs. Camp Refutes Kuhn's Testimony About Cash Return

Blonde Divorcee Also Fails to Find Any Fun Tucked in Love Letters Written Aboard Ship

Tells of Gift

Mrs. Camp Says Bund Chief Presented Her With Ring in 1938

New York, Nov. 24 (AP)—Blonde Mrs. Florence Camp, once termed "my golden angel" by Fritz Kuhn, bluntly and repeatedly contradicted the German-American Bunds-fuehrer's testimony today when she was called as a rebuttal witness at Kuhn's trial on a grand larceny charge.

Both sides rested shortly after she left the stand.

Mrs. Camp testified that Kuhn urged her to divorce her husband, Charles, and to bring her furniture to New York so that they could use it after their marriage. Kuhn already was married and the father of two children.

Handed a copy of Kuhn's love note, in which the bund leader vowed he was "terrible" in love with her, Mrs. Camp said she saw "no fun" in the message. Kuhn had testified that he wrote the billet doux "all in fun" on the night of a ship's party, aboard the S. S. Westernland.

She contradicted Kuhn's testimony that she had given the bund official $565.76 in cash in return for Kuhn's financing the transportation of her furniture from Los Angeles to New York. Later, under questioning by the court, however, Mrs. Camp acknowledged she had given Kuhn $600 in three installments. Kuhn had testified that he had accounted for part of the money which he is accused of stealing from the funds of his organization.

The "golden angel" witness, smartly dressed in a black ensemble with a bustle-backed dress, testified that Kuhn gave her a ring in August 1938. She identified the diamond, which Kuhn had testified was not the one he had bought.

'Patriotic Lady'

Mrs. Camp, whom Kuhn had described as a "patriotic lady" interested in supporting the bund, said she had never contributed to the bund, had never become a member of the women's auxiliary and had never even sympathized with it.

"I know nothing about the bund," she said.

Mrs. Camp spoke so softly that the court told her to raise her voice.

Discussing Kuhn's original ship-board love letter, in which he asked her to become his wife, Prosecutor Herman J. McCarthy asked if there had been any party on the night it was written, as testified by Kuhn.

"No," she said.

Mrs. Camp testified that she had never heard of the bund before meeting Kuhn on the Westernland cruise.

The prosecutor interrupted her testimony to summon G. W. Kunze, Kuhn's vice leader and head of the bund's Nordland camp at Andover, N. J. Kunze, who had testified earlier that he had met Mrs. Camp, stood in front of the witness.

"I never saw him before," Mrs. Camp said.

McCarthy summoned Herman Schwinn, far western director of the bund, who also said he knew Mrs. Camp as a bund sympathizer.

While Schwinn glared at her, the witness calmly said:

"I never saw him before, either."

Under questioning by the court, Mrs. Camp said she gave Kuhn a total of $600 in cash, including $250 in Reno, $250 in Los Angeles and $100 elsewhere.

The testimony appeared to support Kuhn's assertion that the money he spent for transportation of Mrs. Camp's furniture was repaid by her and that he returned it to the Bund account.

McCarthy produced the platinum ring which Kuhn said he bought for $240 for his wife, and the witness said Kuhn gave it to her "for an engagement ring" in San Francisco in August, 1938.

A few minutes later, to the disappointment of spectators in the court room, Mrs. Camp was dismissed after only 45 minutes on the stand—without more than skirting the romance that first inspired the Bundsfuehrer to call her his "golden angel," and then fizzled out with Kuhn's conclusion that she was "no lady."

At the conclusion of the introduction of testimony Judge James G. Wallace announced that he would hear motions this afternoon and summations on Monday. This would put the case in the hands of the jury either late Monday or on Tuesday morning.

The jury was dismissed until Monday.

More Than 20 Ill

WPA Expects Report On 780,000 Dismissed

Gill Says Information Falls Due in January on 'Lost Legion' Discharged September 1

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—The Work Projects Administration expects to know in January what became of its "lost legion" of 780,000 longtime relief clients who were automatically dismissed on September 1.

Corrington Gill, assistant WPA commissioner, said today that a federal survey should show how many found private jobs, obtained help from relatives, went on direct local relief or returned to WPA payrolls.

The 1939 WPA act removed from the rolls persons who had received relief for 18 or more continuous months.

Gill said he did not believe that many of those discharged had been absorbed by the September upturn in private employment. The call then, he said, chiefly was for mechanics and others skilled in the steel and airplane industries,

Ellenville to Get Period Post Office

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—The Public Buildings Administration announced today that bids for construction of a new post office at Ellenville, N. Y., would be opened December 27.

W. E. Reynolds, public buildings commissioner, said the post office would be a one-story building of Dutch colonial architecture similar to that of the many old pre-Revolutionary period buildings in the area.

An allotment of $105,000 was made under the construction program act of 1937 to include the purchase of the site, the cost of construction and administration. The building will be erected on the northeast corner of Liberty and Bogardus streets.

Grappling Crews Cut at Catskill

All but One Cruiser Will Quit Work Upon River

All but one of the cruisers engaged in the search for the bodies of two hunters, who were drowned with three others nearly two weeks ago at Catskill in the Hudson river, will discontinue their dragging of the river tomorrow, it was announced by officials at Catskill this afternoon.

Two or three rowboats and the light state police motor boat will continue in the effort to find the bodies of Earl C. Londenslager, dental supply salesman of this city, and James F. Roe of Catskill, the officials said.

Curtailment of the grappling efforts was decided upon, after the area in which the three other bodies were found, had been covered as thoroughly as possible. The officials announced also that ice formed on the river in the early morning, together with an almost constant roughness of the river, makes it almost impossible for the light boats to continue grappling efforts.

Dragging of the river has been continued systematically each day since a week ago last Monday. The work was intensified following discovery of the body of William S. Riley of Catskill on Wednesday of the first week and the bodies of Dr. John F. Redmond, dentist of Catskill, and Dr. William Harrison (Continued on Page 15)

Will Come Home Envoys To Report

London, Nov. 24 (AP)—United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy will leave for home shortly to celebrate Christmas with his family and to consult with the state department.

The nature of the consultation was not disclosed in the embassy's announcement yesterday that he had been called home by the state department for the talks.

He planned to leave Lisbon, Portugal, December 3, on a clipper plane.

(A member of President Roosevelt's secretariat staff would say only that Kennedy had been granted a leave of absence.)

(In Brussels, it was announced that Ambassador Joseph E. Davies would sail for the United States December 3 aboard the Italian liner Rex for Washington consultations on Belgian trade negotiations.)

Citizens Invited To Meet Tuesday For Factory Talk

A meeting of vital interest to every resident of Kingston will be held on Tuesday evening, December 4, at 8 o'clock in the city court room in the city hall under the auspices of the industrial committee and convention bureau of Kingston.

Chairman Allan L. Hanstein, of the committee, in announcing the date of the meeting said the principal purpose will be to discuss the industrial situation in Kingston, particularly in regard to available factory space.

"The time has come," said Mr. Hanstein, "when Kingston is to stand still or go ahead. At the present time there is a grave lack of available factory space needed to induce industries to locate in Kingston."

One of the questions to be taken up at the meeting is whether an effort should be made to raise money to be used in erecting suitable factory accommodations so that the committee would be able to house any industry seeking a location here.

Chairman Hanstein said that the meeting would be open to the public and that everyone interested in the industrial situation in the city should make it a point to be present.

Nation May Impose Special Tax to Defray Defense Costs; Will Battle for Trade Program

Messersmith Says Nation Must Help to Restore Trade When War Finally Is Ended

Outlines Points

Secretary of State Aide Places U. S. Peace Desire at Top of List

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—Secretary Hull described the administration's reciprocal trade program today as being the chief cornerstone of world peace.

His press conference statement added official weight to indications that the administration wanted to retain the program as basis for lasting peace when the war in Europe was ended.

Hull asserted that the program, scheduled to expire next June, would be the foundation for any such real peace.

He was asked whether he knew of suggestions in Congress that the trade program be allowed to lapse, with the idea of renewing it after the 1940 election. Declining a direct answer, Hull said that, as usual, he would have a full discussion with congressional leaders regarding all matters of foreign policy.

The secretary of state said also that the reciprocal trade treaties were designed to increase domestic employment. He told reporters they should contrast the existing system with the Smoot-Hawley tariff act, which, Hull declared, had thrown 10 to 12 million persons out of work.

Assistant Speaks

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—An official statement of United States aims in world affairs indicated today that the Roosevelt administration would fight to retain its reciprocal trade program as a basis for lasting peace when the war in Europe is over.

Some Democratic senators had been hoping that the question of renewing the trade treaty act, which expires next June 12, would not be raised until after the 1940 election. They said privately that the issue might set Democrats in Congress to fighting among themselves and endanger chances of a Democratic presidential victory.

And, they added, most of the existing trade agreements reached under the policy of scaling down tariffs reciprocally would not be affected by the expiration of the act, because they run from one to three years.

"We Must Help"

But George S. Messersmith, assistant secretary of state, told the governors' session of the 15th New England Conference at Boston yesterday that when the war has ended:

"We must help to restore trade relations on a rational basis of non-discriminatory treatment following the course outlined by our trade agreements program—which despite vast obstacles has achieved substantial results and has demonstrated to all countries a universally applicable and practical means of freeing trade from the restrictions that have all but strangled it in recent years."

"In short, we must be prepared, by assisting in the promotion of healthy economic relationships at home and abroad, to play our part toward creating and maintaining a more stable basis for peace."

Messersmith placed at the top of his list of "cardinal points" the American foreign policy "the earnest desire of our government to remain at peace."

In the opinion of some analysts, he warned belligerents not to mistake this for a "peace at any price" attitude when he declared also:

Outlines Points

"There is virtually no chance of the United States becoming involved (in the war in Europe) unless we are challenged beyond endurance by overt acts of violence directed against us by a warring government."

The "cardinal points" as outlined by Messersmith follow:

"It is the earnest desire of our government to remain at peace."

"It is our hope that peace will be restored on other continents."

"While war is in progress we are determined, in collaboration with the other governments, to keep the western hemisphere neutral and free of warlike activities and to give in our relations with the other American republics practical effect, no less than in peacetime, to the good neighbors policy."

"Where, and when, practicable we shall seek to promote a sound and healthy reconstruction of international economic relationships."

British Say Agents 'Kidnaped' During Observation Tours

Stevens and Best Were Acting With Consent of Government in 'Peace' Report

London, Nov. 24 (AP)—Authoritative British sources said today that the two Britons seized November 9 by the German Gestapo on the German-Netherlands border were endeavoring to see if a German "peace" offer was bona fide.

These sources said Captain Richard Henry Stevens and Sigismund Payne Best were acting with the knowledge of the British government when they were "kidnaped."

The "peace proposals" came from "some German sources."

A British spokesman said. Everything Stevens and Best learned "was transmitted to their own government and it was in the course of the endeavors to see if the peace offer was bona fide that they were kidnaped," he asserted.

The spokesman confirmed reports from Amsterdam that a Netherlands observer was accompanying Stevens and Best when they were taken by the Gestapo.

County Supervisors Name Committee To Study Possible Hotel Purchase

A resolution by Jay W. Rifenbary, of the Second ward, was unanimously adopted Wednesday evening by the board of supervisors authorizing the appointment of a committee to investigate the advisability of the county purchasing the Eagle Hotel property and two buildings adjoining the county clerk's office on Main street from the Ulster County Savings Institution. On the committee authorized under the resolution is Chairman Robert A. Snyder, Supervisors Tutthill McDowell and Jay W. Rifenbary.

In offering the resolution Mr. Rifenbary stated that the intention of the resolution was simply to have a committee appointed to investigate the proposition and ascertain what figure could be secured on the property.

The resolution, he said, did not give the committee any power to bind the county to any agreement, but simply to get a price and lay the matter before the board. The resolution called for a report at the present session.

Speaking for the resolution prior to the vote Mr. Rifenbary said that numerous citizens as well as members of the board had spoken of the proposition of getting a figure on the property, and if the price was desirable, the buildings next to the county clerk's office could be used for offices which are now housed in rented quarters and the old hotel once razed would provide parking space for the cars which now must be parked on the public streets. At present the county is paying between $2,000 and $2,500 for the office quarters in rented buildings. If the property is purchased by the county it will be tax exempt and the cost of maintaining the offices in the two buildings which adjoin the county clerk's office would be lower than the cost of renting quarters.

The resolution was unanimously adopted and Chairman Snyder appointed the committee and announced that the committee and an-

Next Fiscal Year, Roosevelt Says, May See Increase of 500 Million to Arm United States

Discusses Defense

Queries About Taxation and Business Lead to Talk on Armaments

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 24 (AP)—President Roosevelt disclosed today that some consideration was being given the idea of a special tax to finance expenditures for national defense, which may be increased by $500,000,000 in the next fiscal year.

These defense expenditures, the President indicated at a press conference, will be in excess of $2,000,000,000 but probably not as high as $2,300,000,000. He differentiated, incidentally, between appropriations and expenditures for defense.

Questions about business and taxation led the President into a discussion of defense and its financing.

Cutting Is Objective

Of course, he said, the objective of the administration was to cut down all expenditures which possibly could be whittled at the present time.

Assuming that reductions can be made in the budget, that Congress does not appropriate large sums beyond the budget estimates, and that tax revenues increase as they are now, the President said the result would be a reduction in this year's deficit.

But undoubtedly because of the world situation, Mr. Roosevelt continued, a larger sum must be provided for defense—one about $500,000,000 more than was available this year.

The factor, he said, raises a question which he would like to submit to public discussion, which he described as always helpful. The question is:

Should we borrow money to pay for emergency expenditures for defense or peace?

If the money is borrowed, he said, it means no additional taxes. That, the President said, is a thing the country ought to understand and think about. Nothing has been decided yet, he said.

Reporters sought to lead him into a discussion of types of new taxes or amounts, but the chief executive said he was speaking only of a principle and not of actual dollars and cents.

If Congress decided on a pay as you go policy, he said, it would then be time to decide on the kind of taxes.

Reminded that congress might be reluctant to impose new taxes in an election year, the President repeated that the matter was one of principle, rather than of politics.

To an inquiry whether the budget would be balanced, aside from defense outlays, Mr. Roosevelt replied in the negative. But he said there would be a very substantial decrease in the deficit, that it probably could be cut more than half, if the budget were lowered, tax revenues continued to rise and defense costs were paid as they were incurred.

The contemplated addition of $500,000,000 to those costs, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, would be partially for additional persons in uniform.

Asked whether he believed an improvement in business generally was likely to continue for some time, the President smilingly dodged a prognostication by saying he was not playing the market.

The President had hopes the world would be rid of war by next spring, but gave no indication he believed those hopes would be fulfilled.

Navy Would Put Latest 'Sub' Nets In Major Harbors

Department May Request Congress to Allocate $40,000,000 Fund for Anglo Trap

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—Congressional sources said today that the Navy may ask Congress for funds to equip some of the nation's major harbors, particularly those used by the fleet, with the latest type of anti-submarine nets.

Well-informed persons said Naval officials have learned that the British have developed a new type of anti-submarine net so far superior to anything in the United States that consideration was being given to seeking about $40,000,000 to provide similar protection for American harbors.

The new British net was described as being composed of three inch steel bars in a mesh small enough to stop torpedoes as well as submarines.

No information was forthcoming from the Navy either as to the details of the new device or whether it would be recommended for this country.

However, a report which the department sent to a congressional committee last February disclosed that in November, 1937, the Navy was engaged in laying out moorings for a submarine net buoy in San Francisco bay. This information was contained in a Navy letter to the House claims committee recommending payment of a $51,325 claim for damages to a cable owned by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company of San Francisco.

To complete its share of the submarine defenses of San Francisco harbor, the army got $271,670 from congress this year. Normally, the army is responsible for all shore defenses but there is

Not a quiver in a Hoodful

LIFT the bonnet of a 1940 Buick and you'll see a hoodful of power plant whose very dimensions reveal the vast reserve of energy it puts at your command.

But just start this over-size giant—stir this sleeping brute into action, and you find that only the blur of the fan blades betrays its readiness to get up and go!

For you're looking at an engine balanced within limits eight to sixteen times closer than ordinary practice permits.

So precise is Buick's exclusive method of micropoise-balancing after assembly that a misplaced dime's weight on the flywheel rim is enough to reject any engine until that condition has been corrected.

On that score alone this hundred-plus horsepower straight-eight qualifies as the world's one-and-only of its kind.

But in addition to that it's a valve-in-head engine, which means it's at least ten per cent more efficient, size for size—and over and beyond that it's a Dynaflex valve-in-head, which means it uses a compression principle that gets more good out of every drop of gas!

The car this great eight powers has plenty else to lay claim to your attention—smart new styling, Buick Coil Springing's "full float" comfort, "finger flick" Handshift transmission, seats in some models that are next thing to five feet wide.

But even if you overlook them and all the rest of its 72 new features—your best buy's still Buick on its power plant alone.

There's not a quiver in a hoodful of ready-to-ramble energy—and nobody will be more pleased to prove it than your nearest Buick dealer!

"Best buy's Buick!"

CHRISTMAS MONEY

The recent business revival will last till the end of this year, at least. If current employment and spending were not convincing, the approaching deluge of Christmas Fund money would settle the question.

"National prosperity week," says a recent news item, "will begin December 4 with disbursement of $350,000,000 to more than 7,000,000 Christmas Club depositors." This is the largest volume of such funds since 1933. The average member will have nearly $50 to spend.

Members of five Christmas Clubs in this city will receive approximately $341,000, when the five local banks having these clubs mail out checks to the members. This amount is larger than last year, when the banks distributed about $300,000.

And that is but a fraction of the total spending for the big holiday. Santa Claus is the greatest force in the world, next to war, for putting savings into circulation. And his money, needless to say, does good, whereas the contributions of Mars mean mostly waste and harm.

Christmas shopping has already begun and is expected to assume rush proportions by the beginning of December. Roger Babson said recently, "Smart buyers will do their Christmas shopping now." He might have said they "are doing" it now.

He advised everybody to get at this pleasant chore as soon as possible, not simply to avoid the inhuman rush at the last minute, which is even harder on salespeople than on frantic shoppers, but for strictly utilitarian reasons. Observers and forecasters expect this Christmas season to break a lot of records for volume of buying. The late comers may find the things they want to buy already gone.

Kingston merchants are prepared to serve local shoppers with the latest merchandise for their Christmas needs. Local merchants will offer the same wide selection of goods at reasonable prices that can be obtained in Metropolitan areas.

MOST DISASTROUS YEAR

Human beings forget disasters easily, particularly if they themselves have not been affected directly. That is why it comes as something of a surprise to learn that, in the year ending last June 30, Red Cross help was required in the largest number of disasters recorded in any twelve-month period of its history.

There were sixty tornadoes, twenty-five fires, thirty-one floods, ten cloudbursts, four epidemics, three forest fires, fifteen wind and hail storms, and nine disasters of other types, all of serious enough proportions to need special relief work. There were 217 such catastrophes in the United States or their possessions. The Chilean earthquake victims and many war refugees were also on that long list of merciful service.

Disaster relief includes repair and rebuilding of homes, replacement of household goods and clothing, mass shelter and feeding, prevention of epidemics, replacement of equipment needed for jobs (such as boats and tackle for fishermen), and a host of other things. This record year demanded "the most unusual rehabilitation programs" ever undertaken by the American Red Cross.

It's an exciting tale, in the making of which millions of Americans share by means of their membership dollars.

DISCOVERING EACH OTHER

Two South American newspapers have received the first Maria Moors Cabot Prizes in journalism. These awards were established at Columbia University, New York, by Dr. Godfrey Lowell Cabot of Boston, to recognize the services of the press as an agency of public education in the Americas. La Prensa of Buenos Aires and El Comercio of Lima, Peru, were chosen because of their "journalistic achievement which advances public understanding and sympathy between the peoples of any two countries in the Western Hemisphere."

The presentation of the bronze plaques for the papers and gold medals for their editors was made by Dr. Butler, president of the university. The head of the Columbia school of journalism and Mayor LaGuardia spoke. Many publishers, educators and editors were present.

This is but one of many interesting developments in the awakening of North and South American interest in the family of nations of the Western Hemisphere. An increasing exchange of students and teachers is another. So, too, are conferences on such matters as health, architecture, transportation, and so on.

There is a strong flow of travel between the two continents which began when war checked travel to Europe and the Orient, and which has increased rapidly as travelers discovered the variety of culture, scenery and entertainment it offered. We confess now that we were only recently woefully ignorant of our neighbors from the Rio Grande to the Straits of Magellan, but we are learning rapidly and enthusiastically.

THOSE BRUTAL FINNS

The gift "to see ourselves as others see us" seems sadly lacking among Russian leaders. Lately, in a violent press attack on Finland, Red statesmen accuse the Finnish leaders of "fostering an anti-Soviet policy" and "teaching the school children to hate Russia."

It never seems to occur to the Moscow outfit that they are fostering an anti-Finnish policy, and that the world knows it and laughs at their hypocrisy. It is the Russian government that is teaching the Finns to hate Russia.

It must be hypocrisy, because if it were serious the world would have to admit that Stalin and his staff are crazy. The limit of propagandist absurdity was reached in the pitiful wail last week from the Russian press, about the "reactionary elements" in Finland who were "dreaming of spreading the boundaries of Finland all the way to the Urals of Russia."

That's quite a jump even for the athletic Finns. With all their courage, the world can't quite believe that 3,000,000 Finns are plotting to grab half the Russian Empire.

English people, who don't seem to know much about their language, are always surprised when they come to America and learn that the word "secretary" has four syllables.

 METHODS OF RELIEVING MIGRAINE

I have in mind a relative, a middle-aged woman, who suffered severely with one-sided headaches—migraine. Every two or three weeks she would have an attack of nausea followed by the severe headache. She went to bed for the two days that the headache lasted; this was the only known treatment at that time.

Migraine is usually on one side of the head but there are many cases where it affects both sides. There is usually nausea and vomiting, pain in and above the eyes, and in some cases, a form of slight delirium—not clear headed. Migraine resembles trifacial neuralgia—the dolores—in that between the attacks the patient is entirely free of headache. Just what brings on the attacks is unknown, although in the case of the relative above mentioned, fatigue (mental and physical) was undoubtedly the cause. If she could be persuaded to get more rest, do less visiting and running about after a hard day of housework, she could be kept fairly free of the attacks. Pain on the one side is present in the majority of cases and may be throbbing, boring, or gripping. The pain may occur in the forehead, side of head, at top of head, or behind the eyes.

Although cause is unknown, the treatment now given to relieve an attack is the drug tartrate—ergot product—but put up under another or other names by drug manufacturers. It is used by injection under the skin or into a vein and relief is obtained in nearly all cases (over 90 per cent). When used by mouth it gives relief in from 60 to 70 per cent of cases.

Dr. Walter Alvarez, Mayo Clinic, reports that in a number of cases where the ergotamine tartrate failed to give relief, the breathing of pure oxygen (100 per cent) has promptly stopped the attack. And in that most severe headache that follows the putting of air up into spinal canal to get an X-ray of the brain, breathing of 100 per cent oxygen brings relief.

It is gratifying to know that this distressing ailment can now be relieved by ergotamine tartrate or the breathing in of pure oxygen.

Allergy or sensitivity to various foods or other substances is believed to be one of the causes of migraine. Send for Dr. Barton's booklet entitled "Allergy" (No. 108) which explains how symptoms may be relieved in such cases. Send your request to The Bell Library, Post Office Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y., enclosing ten cents to cover cost of handling and mailing and mention the name of the Kingston Daily Freeman.

BABSON ON BUSINESS

WAR BETWEEN THE STATES

Babson Decries "Balkanizing of America"

Babson Park, Mass., Nov. 24—A new war is being fought between the states—one far more threatening to the long-term future of America than that fought from 1861 to 1865. Unfair state taxes, truck restrictions, ports of entry, agricultural quarantine stations, toll gates and other discriminatory barriers are being erected by individual states against their neighbors. As Governor Stark of Missouri says, "America is rapidly becoming Balkanized" by this un-Christian policy.

The movement, which was born as the result of the depression need to keep trade and wages at home, gained momentum right up until 1939. To feel the full effect of this torrent of hampering legislation, you have to be doing an interstate business. While the Supreme Court has been making history by extending the long arm of the federal law, the states have been trying to isolate themselves in a spirit of un-American autonomy. Instead of standardizing their laws and making it easier for employers to expand and to hire new workers, they are returning to medieval practices. If this epidemic spreads much farther, it will either destroy the economic basis of the Union or will force the federal government to take over States' rights!

Huge Staff of Experts

These state barricades have not been wanted by the New Deal. Yet the latter, in putting into effect hundreds of new federal laws concerning business and labor, has given state legislators a lot of ideas. Hence, instead of a set of hundreds of new laws, there have been 48 sets of hundreds of new laws. An employer who does an interstate business today must retain a staff of experts. These experts are not employed to search for new products or to improve manufacturing technique. Their job is merely to keep their managers informed on the stream of new tax, labor, and other legislation.

Take the Social Security set-up, for instance. There is the federal law and in addition each state has a law. Consequently, if a concern has employees in 48 states, it must make returns in 48 different ways to 48 separate social security boards, as well as to the federal board. The Wagner Act has been backed up by labor acts in many states, but they all differ! State labor boards make decisions which may or may not be consistent with the decisions made by the national board. Right now, the Wisconsin Labor Board is about to come to grips with the national board. Then there are discriminatory trade taxes. We have chain store taxes in 19 states—in some countries and cities even—and they are all different.

Sales and "Use" Taxes

There are 34 states which have income tax laws and every one of these is different. There are 28 states where sales taxes are now in effect 18 of which have the hard-boiled "use" taxes. Restrictions on the free transportation of farm products are costing U. S. farmers millions of dollars annually. To show how this works, Wisconsin, Iowa, Washington and Minnesota slapped a whopping big tax on oleomargarine, which contains cottonseed oil, to protect their buttermakers. Angered by this discrimination against one of her vital products, Arkansas proposed a retaliatory law which would slap a 25 per cent tax on apples and dairy products from these states—and it was barely defeated.

There are hundreds of other barriers. Take the motor truck laws, for instance. Length, width, and weight regulations differ in nearly every state. Trucks can enter some western states only at certain points. These "ports of entry" are similar to customs points on the border of any foreign country. Guards weigh the trucks, measure them, swarm over them, and inspect the cargo. These state barricades cause bad feeling. In a vindictive spirit, neighboring states put up retaliatory barriers which are more stringent and the situation becomes progressively worse.

Shackling New Employers

The basic effect of all this is to make it hard for employers to give jobs. Employers, who would normally be expanding their business into new areas, hesitate because they do not want to add to their legal worries. They do not want to buy licenses; register as foreign corporations; pay social security, income, and sales taxes; study labor laws, etc. They figure it is cheaper and easier to "sit tight."

The people who would get jobs if these employers opened branch sales offices or branch plants in a new state lose out. So does the state because it has to support more unemployed. Sooner or later it has to impose higher taxes, thus driving employees already in business out of the state. This further increases unemployment and the tax burden. It is a vicious circle.

Thousands of Forms to File

A graphic illustration of how these federal and state trade barriers are increasing is told by the Saturday Evening Post. Ten years ago the Post filed a hundred forms with the federal and state governments. In recent years the Post has filed over 100,000 forms! Yet, for Canada they file only one form. Imagine the cost of making out these thousands of forms to say nothing of the amount of taxes paid.

The biggest problem which we face today is the same one we faced seven years ago when Franklin Roosevelt was elected—namely the millions of jobless. The only solution of this problem is more employers. We cannot expect that people will be put back to work if we make it hard for employers to hire them. The great need of America today is not more laws, more restrictions, or more barriers against our fellow-men. It is exactly the opposite. What we need is more unselfishness, more fairness and more friendship toward our neighbors. This gospel which Jesus taught 2,000 years ago must be recognized before real prosperity will return!

Primary Demand of Americans Is That Any Citizen Shall Have Fair Trial for Offenses

By DAVID LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1939)
 Washington, Nov. 24—If there is one thing Americans demand of their government, it is that the citizen shall have a fair trial, whether his alleged offenses are economic or criminal. The National Labor Relations Board has the task of trying economic offenses and the Wagner law states plainly that the findings of the board must be supported by "substantial evidence." Courts of law are empowered to review such findings to learn whether the board has or has not weighed the evidence properly.

The language, therefore, of a decision just come to hand from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, sixth circuit, is of especial interest because the court finds the labor board itself guilty of distorting facts and misconstruing evidence. The decision is unanimous on the part of the three judges, one of whom happens to be Judge Florence Allen, who has recently been mentioned as a possible appointee to the Supreme Court of the United States. Says the Circuit Court of Appeals in its formal opinion, concluding paragraph:

"The petition of the board for enforcement of its order must be denied because its findings of unfair labor practices are unsupported by substantial evidence. Sensible of the great social purpose of the National Labor Relations Act, courts have gone far to uphold rulings of the administrative agency charged with its enforcement, doubtless in the belief that overzealousness must in time yield to expertness in weighing evidence and that time and responsibility must develop a judicial approach to disputed issues in a tribunal which, though administrative, exercises to such a large extent the high judicial function. It may not be amiss, indeed, it may be in the highest public interest to observe that the beneficent purposes of the act will not be effectuated by decisions such as that presently reviewed."

Now the facts of the case are very interesting. The Empire Furniture Corporation was a new company succeeding a predecessor corporation which had gone bankrupt. For three years the plant had been idle, "contributing to the distress of the unemployed in Johnson City, Tenn." Upon the initiative of a retired banker a new enterprise "was started in the old plant through the co-operation of private enterprise with community effort," the Chamber of Commerce giving substantial aid so as to lighten the relief load, namely the loan of $17,500 so as to help the new company meet conditions imposed by the RFC, which loaned the company $175,000. The city remitted back taxes and lowered current assessments to get things started. Everybody cooperated. The company began operations in June, 1935, and up to April, 1937, when labor troubles arose, progress was being made in opening up new markets and even in reducing its loan slightly to the RFC.

The Wagner act does not differ from other statutes in the grant of such broad authority, but all statutes now are going to be subjected to public criticism wherever they permit rulings which interfere with economic progress and adversely affect the welfare of the workers and producers and investors in business enterprises. Arbitrary action by commissions and boards will be heard from as an issue of the 1940 campaign unless soon corrected by congress. (Reproduction rights reserved).

Squeezing of Neutrals Indicates Second Phase of European Blockade Has Begun

Washington, Nov. 23—The second stage of the economic blockade precipitated by the European war has begun, namely the squeezing of neutrals contiguous to Germany. It has come in the first few months of the present war, in contrast to the application of stringent measures only in the fourth year of the last war.

In effect, neutral trade is reduced to the bare necessities of sustenance of the neutral countries concerned and the whole export trade of Germany is subjected to a strangulation of the utmost severity. The laying of mines indiscriminately off the coast of England by the Germans has furnished the provocation to the British to shut off all German exports, but it was inevitable that Germany should be blockaded against all outgoing as well as incoming trade if economic pressure by the Allies was to be applied to extremes.

Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, Holland and Belgium will feel the pinch, and to a gradually increasing extent, Italy and the Balkan States. But the strategy of the allies permits, they reason, of no other course. As for world opinion, the British and French governments feel that the neutrals know the war is being fought to prevent the independence of small states and that hence the peoples of neutral countries will undergo considerable hardship without developing any appreciable amount of ill-will against France and England, as might have been the case if Germany had not been the aggressor.

The finishing touches are being put on the British scheme of contraband control this very month and it is interesting to note that the latest American revision of the neutrality laws really makes it easier for the allies to know what is being exported from America to Europe than they could possibly have known in the period, for instance, prior to American entry into the World War in 1917. Under the provisions popularized by the isolationists in the last two sessions of Congress and virtually forced upon the administration in order to get the embargo repealed was a system of "cash and carry" by which title has to be transferred before any goods are shipped out of the United States to European belligerent ports.

In the period between 1914 and 1917, the allies had no way of getting at the contraband trade unless they seized American or neutral ships plying between ports of this country and Europe. But, now that title has to be transferred to foreign hands on American territory and virtually all the shipping which crosses the Atlantic covers cargoes destined in whole or in part directly or indirectly, to belligerents or neutrals contiguous to belligerents, the British can establish their system or certificate control in the United States itself.

Thus, by congressional action, the United States government has transferred to foreign governments authority over what shall or shall not pass out of America to European ports. It is, of course, very desirable from the British and French viewpoints that they find out what is being exported without being put to all the trouble of stopping ships at sea, boarding them, examining papers or diverting vessels into their own ports abroad for detailed inspection.

But, from the standpoint of American rights, the spectacle of agents of foreign governments sitting in New York and, in effect, telling American exporters what they can or cannot ship and to whom they can or cannot sell is such a violent change from anything that has happened before in the history of the United States that it is doubtful whether the people generally realize the precedents being established in favor of belligerents and against the freedom of neutrals.

It is, of course, contended academically that America surrenders no rights under international law, but the practical effect is the same. Actually, too, it is better for the foreign governments to conduct their inspections and issue certificates before cargoes are shipped from America than to cause delays and introduce hazards of inspection or seizure at sea. The British may well smile at the good fortune resulting to them from the demand of the isolationist group that title to a substantial amount of our exports to Europe must pass to foreigners before cargoes can leave the United States. It plays into the hands of those who wish to impose a rigid control and effective blockade on products destined not only for belligerents, but for neutral countries adjacent to the nations at war. Hunt for Buried Cahuenga Gold Starts in Hollywood

Los Angeles, Nov. 24 (AP).—The efficacy of the "doodle bug" as a locator of gold will be put to the acid test Monday as Henry Jones, a mining man, began digging in the hardpan of the Hollywood Bowl for the historic Cahuenga treasure.

Carl Jacobson, manager of the bowl where symphony concerts are held during the summer months, will look on with a sheriff's deputy, as Jones and his partners, Walter Combs of Bakersfield and E. W. Combs, Walter's 79-year-old uncle, start operations.

The treasure, legend has it, consists of gold and jewels contributed in the middle of the 19th century to aid the Mexican liberator, Benito Juarez, in his fight against Emperor Maximilian. Jones and his partners claim they have tentatively located the treasure with their device. The county supervisors granted them permission to dig. They posted bonds and guaranteed to fill the hole. The Hollywood Bowl would get half the hoard.

Tragedy supposedly stalks the history of the treasure, which was claimed to have been buried first in the San Francisco Bay area, then transferred to Cahuenga Pass here.

Jones declined to explain operation of the "doodle bug," but said it had been used elsewhere with success. He described it as a mechanism which displayed sensitivity to the presence of certain minerals and gave most indications of underground gold at the point at which digging was started.

Committee to Meet

Committees in charge of the annual card party to be held by St. Joseph's parish in the municipal auditorium on Thursday evening, November 30, will meet at the school hall at 8 o'clock this evening to complete arrangements. It is planned to have enough tables on the auditorium floor to seat a thousand players at a time. This card party is an annual event and is always largely attended.

More Than 1,000 Persons Attend Holiday Affair

The third annual ball, commemorating the 37th anniversary of the founding of the Congregation Ahavath Israel, drew more than 1,000 people to the Municipal Auditorium, Thanksgiving Eve, to enjoy the WOR stage show and dance with Bunny Berigan's radio band furnishing the music.

Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman opened the program, complimenting the congregation on its progress over the past 37 years, and its efforts toward civic life through the medium of religion. The mayor presented Herman G. Rafalowsky, president of Ahavath Israel, and Harry Herschfield, celebrated newspaper cartoonist, who was master of ceremonies.

Mr. Herschfield presided at the microphone for the rest of the evening, injecting humorous stories between the acts. Midway in the program he called on Michael S. Strawgate, general chairman of the ball, and he responded with thanks for all who helped make the event a success. The entertainment went on as scheduled, except for the appearance of Baby Rose Marie. Sylvia Froos, star of the recent American Legion ball, returned in her place, and pleased the audience with her vocal selections.

Bunny Berigan's orchestra furnished dance music until 2 a. m. and was popular with the crowd that remained until closing time.

To Entertain

Fred Van Deusen of Kingston will present his tricks of magic and mystery at the West Hurley School on the evening of November 28 at 8 o'clock. The proceeds are to go for the benefit of the school. Tickets may be secured from any student of the school.

The popular belief that blue eyes denote physical strength and strong, steel nerves seems to be substantiated by the number of pilots in the U. S. air forces that have blue eyes. More than three-quarters of these pilots have eyes of varying shades of blue.

The Creeping Man

Chapter 42

The Hairpin

SEVERAL hours later, on the afternoon of the same day, Tuck stood looking out of a window in the living room overlooking the Horseshoe. A car drove up to the Devoe door, and Mrs. Murchison accompanied by Jared Devoe came out of the house and drove away.

"Bunny," she exclaimed, "He's gone. Jared Devoe, I mean."

Bunny looked up from the needlepoint chair cover she was working at. "Well, Tuck?"

"Don't you see? It's all right—let's go out and hunt for your Creeping Man, Bunny! Out where you saw him, the other night! Maybe he had a ladder and came up over the cliffs. We could find the mark, perhaps. You know Michael hasn't paid any attention to that story, because he seemed to have his mind just set on Duncan being guilty. Do you believe Duncan is guilty, Bunny?"

Bunny laid down her work and crossed her hands over her knee. She looked up at Tuck with a hint of pain in the clear gray eyes. "I don't know what to think, dear Michael's as fully clever, and awfully decent. He wouldn't talk that way to me about Duncan unless he had some basis for it. He never talks like that without a reason. But honestly, looking at Duncan, listening to him talk, can you believe that he is the fiend who is running wild here?"

"No," said Tuck promptly. "I cannot. I don't think Michael's telling fibs, but I think he's mistaken. I think he's prejudiced, for the first time since I've known him. So, let's go ourselves, Bunny, and find out what we can. If we can find out anything, I'll go to Father. Or rest—er with it if Michael won't listen."

"Michael would listen. He is fair-minded, lamb. I don't want to admit it, but I must."

"Bunny," Tuck said, her eyes on the geraniums blooming in the window boxes, "are you in love with Duncan?"

Bunny frowned. "I don't know," she said, as if they were discussing a remote question. "I don't honestly know. I could have been, I suppose, if I'd seen more of him. I'm all upset and sort of miserable these days because it seems as if it's no use having faith in human nature any longer if that nice boy turns out to be a dreadful criminal. I don't see very much of him, Tuck."

"No. Well, I like him. I'd like you to marry him. You make a lovely looking couple, both of you so tall, and his eyes so blue, and his hair so brown, and his shoulders so broad, and you have gray eyes and black hair and generally darling."

Bunny laughed in spite of herself, and jumped up to give Tuck a hug. "You are a lamb," she said. "I feel better. Do we go to the woods then?"

"Feeling quite sure," said Tuck seriously, in a lowered tone, "that the real villain of the piece, as yet unmasked, has gone away—I'm not afraid to go. What could he do to us, anyway? Nothing."

"She could have let him in, that night, couldn't she?" Bunny asked. "It's all there. Motive opportunity, everything. You know, Tuckie, I think Duncan believes that too. He's afraid he can't prove it. He hates Devoe. It was Devoe he was threatening to kill, Tuck. It must have been. He didn't mean it, but you can't blame him for saying it. He doesn't know the truth, and he thinks that woman is his sister-in-law and—she paused—"he hates her too, in spite of what they're trying to make out. I'm sure of that much."

They reached the garden gate, and stood hesitantly there, behind them the house and security; before them the dark woods, but perhaps, the unraveling of a secret.

Dark Woods

AT THE moment, Charlotte Jean came running down the path. "Miss Forrester, ma'am, you gave me quite a start, indeed you did," she said, wiping her hands on her apron. "Mr. Michael said that I was to keep my eye on you, and if you started off into the woods, like I was to tell you to come back."

Tuck's eyes were round and innocent. "But why, Charlotte Jean? It's perfectly safe now."

The two girls went on down the path, reached the fork where the farther trail turned off toward the river and followed it. The woods were dark and full of mysterious shadows. Tuck jumped off the path, when a root popped out of the undergrowth.

"Don't have the slip test idea, I'm afraid of," she whispered, "but the place gets me Oh!"

"What is it?"

Tuck put her hand over Bunny's. "Something moved. I saw something there in the shadows. . . . It moved against the light. . . . just ahead of that clump of trees. There! S. . . . Bunny's arm as she spoke. "Don't you see?"

Bunny did not need to answer, for just as Tuck spoke the figure in the shadows resolved itself into Dr. McBain, wandering along the path toward them. "Head down, pipe in his mouth. He looked up quickly and was obviously startled to see them as they had been to see him."

"I hope I didn't startle you?" he said in a moment.

"I'm afraid you did," Tuck's voice was shaky. "It's such an eerie sort of place, and we weren't looking for anyone to be here."

"Eerie? I'm afraid I hadn't noticed it. I come here frequently to think out any problem that comes up." He looked at them kindly, and yet inquiringly. "You're both pale," he said sharply. "I suppose it's this air of mystery and terror surrounding us. My wife is really ill with it all."

"It's been awful, hasn't it?" Tuck said. "I thought Mrs. McBain couldn't be well. She looked dreadfully pale yesterday."

"I'm glad she isn't living as close to it as you are," he said, tapping his pipe on his boot heel. "Your husband is working hard. I suppose I haven't had a long talk with him for several days." He dropped his voice. "I sincerely hope he is making headway," he said.

"I think he is. He's down town working that machine. He doesn't tell us very much, you know, it's a very complicated business."

McBain's face was stern. "It is that," he agreed heartily. "We shall be more than glad when it is cleared up. It is terrible—terrible. I do not oh, I shouldn't say that."

I did not believe that Dr. Murchison could possibly be dead. I am beginning to change my opinion. He drew a deep breath. "Oh, well, I mustn't burden you with my feelings. I'm thankful that it's Mr. Forrester, and not I, who has to deal with it. He is a very keen lad. I noticed how very cleverly he concealed his real knowledge at the inquest, regarding Miss Lissey's last talk with you. No one who didn't know. . . . or who hadn't suspected the truth. . . . would have guessed that he didn't tell all he knew."

"No, I don't believe they would. Of course he couldn't possibly tell everything she told us."

"No. Poor soul! I detested her heartily in life, but it seems a very small thing to cost one's life. However. . . . I must be off." He looked at his wrist watch. "I have a lecture. Good afternoon. . . . and a pleasant walk."

Big Log

THE two girls went on only a few steps until they came to the end of the path, or, rather, to the edge of the wood. Perhaps at some time the trees here had extended to the water's edge, but they had been cleared for a distance of an eighth of a mile along the river and perhaps twenty feet back from the edge. This was the rocky stretch of ground. . . . although Michael had not told them. . . . where he had seen Miss Lissey with her reading glass. This also was the place, just at the end of the path, where Mrs. Devoe's body had been found. Not knowing the exact spot, they did not shiver, and avoid it, but went on, slowly, up the bank.

"Do you see that big log, about half way up the clearing?" Bunny asked quietly. "It's just under the overhang of the trees. Look. . . . that big stump is almost directly between it and the water, Tuck, that's where we were sitting the night we saw him. . . . The Creeping Man. On that log, you know. . . . she stopped suddenly, and turned to look at Tuck. "I never occurred to me before. How stupid we were! That man. . . . he could perfectly well have been hidden on the other side of the stump. Perhaps not hidden at all. Tuck. Perhaps just somebody sitting there enjoying the sunset. And then we came along, and sat down, and perhaps he didn't like to startle us by getting up suddenly. So he just crept away quietly when it got dark. Oh, Tuck, of course that's the explanation!"

Tuck said nothing, although her rueful face betrayed her feelings. They had reached the stump, now, and leaned against it. Bunny looked behind her swiftly to the fallen log, where she and Duncan had sat. "Tuck, you slip down on the other side of the stump," she commanded, "and I'll go and sit on the log. Then, we'll see if that idea would be possible. It would certainly answer a big question in my mind."

"No, we better trade places. You're bigger than I. This stump isn't so awfully tall, Bunny. You come. A man would be more your size."

So Bunny went over and dropped down behind the stump as if she were a man smoking his after-dinner pipe. Tuck surveyed her from the log.

"I can almost nearly see the top of your head, but not quite," she said. "But it might have been done. Still. . . . I don't see how you and Duncan could possibly have come all along the bank and not seen him, if he were sitting there all the time. Tuck's nose is no underbrush around at all."

Bunny got up and came over to her. She bent down and picked up something from the ground. "This must be yours, Tuck, this hairpin," she said.

"Pearl gray shell? Who in the world wears pearl gray shell hairpins in this day and age?"

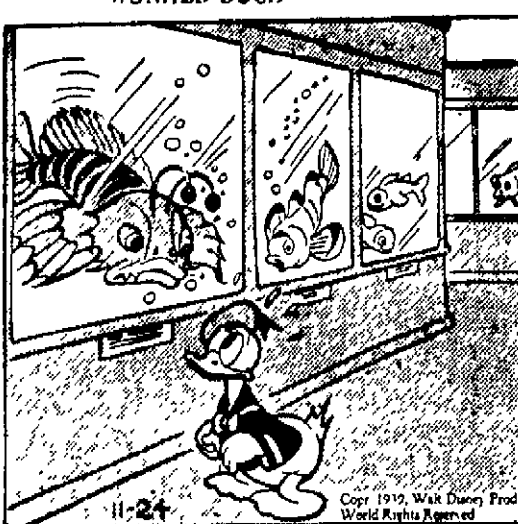

The answer came to both of them at once. "Mrs. Devoe did," Bunny said quietly. "She must have walked along here just before. . . ."

Tuck jumped up. "Hush, Bunny. Don't say it."

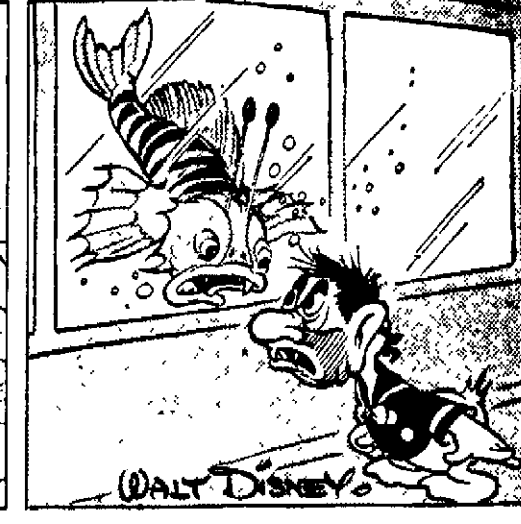

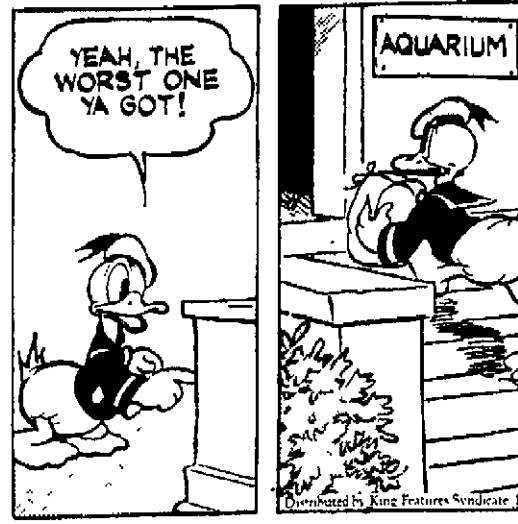

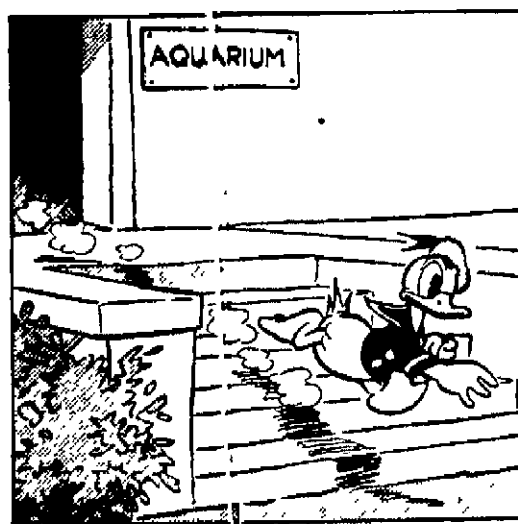

And then they heard, quite plainly, the murmur of voices. Bunny swung around and gazed into the woods where all was still. Tuck, keener of hearing, perhaps, went forward cautiously and peered over the steep cliff. She gazed down incredulously for a moment, then tiptoed back to Bunny. "You know what it is?" she demanded. "It's that Michael Forrester, with Gordon Deane, drifting down-stream in a brand new gray boat. Cushions and everything. Isn't that terrible?" She looked at Bunny tragically. "Bunny, do you suppose he's lost his mind?"

We're making a collection of boners pulled on the radio. If you have any pets, join our little club. Here are a few samples of silly things we've heard recently:

"So-and-so nose drops brings you the correct time. . . ."

"If you have trouble sleeping, fill your mug with so-and-so. . . ."

"You should bake this custard standing in a pan of water. . . ."

"So-and-so cleans the membranes and heels. . . . (somebody forgot they don't spell words on the radio!)"

Wearily Willie—Lady, do you want to buy anything in my line? Housewife—Your line? You don't mean you are trying to earn an honest living? Wearily Willie—Yes, ma'am. Housewife—What are you selling? Wearily Willie—Dog chains.

And speaking of dogs: A woman has trained her dear little dog to lay down on the hole in the front room rug when the door bell rings.

Outside the storm raged. The thunder rolled, and lightning flashed almost continuously. Presently a bolt struck Mr. Jones and knocked him out of bed. He arose, yawned, rubbed his eyes, and said: "All right, dear, I'll get up."

We will bet I didn't sing: Monsieur—Tonight, I will steal beneath your balcony and whisper a sweet serenade. Madame—Do and I'll drop you a flower. Monsieur—Ah, in a moment of mad love? Madame—No. In a pot.

"I have quit buying souvenirs," commented the lady traveler. "There is a certain sameness to them. Wherever you buy them, they are made in Japan."

Clerk—Sorry, madam, but licenses are issued only when your form is filled out properly. Sweet Young Thing—Why, I like your nerve, sir! We can get married no matter what I look like.

An alleged female authority says the girls should have a daily rest as it is necessary for beauty. Why not also one at night?

Dad—Sandy, how dare you hit your baby brother? Sandy—Auntie made me. Aunt Alice—Nonsense. I told you that if you hit him I would never kiss you again. Sandy—Well, I couldn't let a chance like that slip by.

A really good time can't be planned—it just happens.

Most generous people are either poor or else confine their generosity to carefully considered channels.

Ruggan Hunter (as he entered the junk shop)—Have you anything in the shape of an old barrel? Dealer (sadly)—I have, but unfortunately my wife is not for sale.

Teacher—And now, will anyone give me an example of an indirect tax, please? Pupil—The dog tax. Teacher—Why do you term that an indirect tax? Pupil—Because the dog doesn't pay it.

The trouble with being chosen to second the nomination, a man has to shave and change his clothes.

Wife—From whom is your letter? Husband—Why do you want to know? Wife—There you are! Why do I want to know? You're the most inquisitive person in the world!

Salvationists at Rotary-Kiwanis Joint Assembly

At the joint luncheon meeting of the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs held Wednesday at the Governor Clinton Hotel, Major Edward Carey of New York city, secretary of the eastern division of the Salvation Army, was the guest speaker. Col. William H. Barrett, who was scheduled to address the service club, was called to Chicago. President B. C. Van Ingen of Rotary presided and both clubs were represented with nearly perfect attendance. In welcoming the Kiwanis Club President Van Ingen expressed a desire for more joint gatherings since the principal of both organizations was the same. President Huben of the Kiwanis Club expressed the hope that some other anniversary might be changed so that the Kiwanis Club could reciprocate on its meeting day on Thursday.

Following the inspiring talk on Thanksgiving by Major Carey, visiting Salvationists presented a talented musical program. Salvationist Pershing Flanders played a piano solo and also a cornet and piano solo. His dexterity and versatility in playing the piano with one hand, holding the cornet with the other and at the same time rendering excellent music was greatly appreciated. As a one-man orchestra he made a hit. Accordion selections were rendered by the Dolly Sisters of the Salvation Army. Roger Loughran of the local Salvation Army advisory board introduced Major Carey. The speaker in his Thanksgiving message, took a quarter and found upon that inanimate object his theme. "E pluribus Unum," "Liberty" and "In God We Trust." These ideals, he said, were not placed on this coin by accident but by design. The unity that the pioneers of this country desired welded the original 13 states and subsequently the 48 states, the liberty that they secured for everyone, although the black man received his belatedly and through the courage and understanding of Abraham Lincoln, we are enjoying today and worshipping God in the manner that one's conscience dictates is our priceless heritage.

The pioneers of this country faced what appeared to be insurmountable odds in the formative years of this country. There was the problem of the land, which was followed by industry and then science. And all that has been accomplished we are enjoying today, and for which we should give thanks. The scene of refugees coming from the pogroms in central Europe, which are shown on the screen and published in newspapers should make Americans even more thankful.

While giving thanks and praise to the pioneers for the good things we enjoy, the speaker continued, we should look to the future and be mindful of the problems that are facing us today. He listed four major problems in this country today. Unemployment. There are over 10,000,000 people in this country, who through no fault of their own are idle. Crime. In the criminal ranks of our country today there are 700,000 and the average age is 19 years. Besides being a pitiful condition, he said, each citizen pays for huge crime bills either through taxes or in the purchase of everyday commodities. Breakdown in morals. He asserted that the breakdown in morals is more pronounced in the youth in this so-called jitterbug age. Drinking, the divorce courts, the automobile parties and loose conversation were evidences of the moral breakdown. Irreligion. Over 17,000,000 youth in the United States, he declared, are without religious contacts either through church or Sunday school.

While we are giving thanks, he said, we should not lose sight of the opportunity to work to better these conditions for the happiness of all. He praised the service clubs, the relief agencies, the character building organizations and the Salvation Army for its part in helping to remedy these deplorable conditions.

Guests present included Warren Wilbur, Harry Hickock, Rotarian Judge Ingman and Kenneth Simpson. A delicious turkey dinner was served. Dan Bittner presided at the piano with Paul Zucca leading the singing.

Bomb and Mine War Scourges

Destructive Twins Most Important Weapons in Modern Warfare.

WASHINGTON. — Aerial bombs and sea mines—two of the most potent scourges during the World war—are an even more important military factor now, in the view of military experts here.

The use of bombs by the German air force played a dominant role in the swift conquest of Poland. Great Britain and France are depending on mines as a vital part of their strategy to stretch a sea blockade that will bring about the economic collapse of Germany.

In both weapons world powers have made major strides in development since the World war. Experts believe that prolongation of the present conflict will add still further to their perfection as agents of death and destruction.

Two Types of Bombs Used.
High-speed, multiengine bombing planes, for example, now carry loads of huge demolition bombs totaling from 8,000 to 10,000 pounds on long-range flying missions designed to cripple strategic centers or industries.

Broadly speaking, military powers employ two types of bombs in modern warfare—demolition and fragmentation. The demolition bombs, filled with TNT, are designed to destroy property and military objectives such as factories, air bases, railroad stations and forts.

They are usually equipped with time fuses so that after being dropped they can penetrate before exploding, thus insuring greater destruction. Some are fixed so that they explode on impact with an object. Sizes of these bombs, which are guided to their destination by so-called "fins" similar to the feather on an arrow, range from 25 pounds to 2,000.

A 2,000-pound bomb, experts believe, has sufficient demolition power to accomplish terrific damage.

Principles and sizes of bombs used by the leading powers are broadly the same. The United States army air corps, for example, uses demolition missiles of 25, 50, 100, 300, 600, 1,100 and 2,000 pounds.

Explode on Impact.

The fragmentation bombs, which are similar to an artillery shell, are usually much smaller. They are designed to explode on impact with the ground, hurl splinters over wide areas, and are usually employed only in raids on personnel such as troop concentrations.

The size of the bomb load depends on the lifting power of a plane. One of the United States army's huge, four-motored "flying fortresses" last August lifted an 11,000-pound load to 33,000 feet, inasmuch as it was not carrying gasoline for a long flight, the load would be less in case it were assigned to a distant mission. Smaller aircraft carry proportionately lesser loads.

Like aerial bombs, construction of marine mines by different nations follow somewhat similar patterns.

The mines, usually loaded with several hundred pounds of high explosives, are designed to sink even heavily armored warships. Thus, their explosive effect on merchant ships usually causes destruction in event of contact.

Travel in United States

Near Record Proportions

WASHINGTON. — Travel in the United States has approached record-breaking proportions this year, but attendance at many national parks has been sharply reduced, according to figures released by the department of interior.

The American Automobile association attributed the increased travel to the New York and San Francisco world fairs, and blamed the drop in park attendance to an increase in the number of parks charging fees for admission, automobiles, motorcycles and guides.

Parks where such fees are charged for the first time this year, reported that in the 10 months ending July 31, 1,612,477 persons visited there as compared with 1,737,227 in the same period last year, or a drop of 7 per cent.

Attendance at parks where fees had been charged in previous years was unchanged by this year's drop totaling 1,671,622, as compared with 1,496,149, or an increase of 11.5 per cent over last year. However, parks still free of all charges gained 1 per cent for that period, with an aggregate total of 1,112,993 for 1939 and 929,818 in 1938.

Gold Is Mined Easy Way

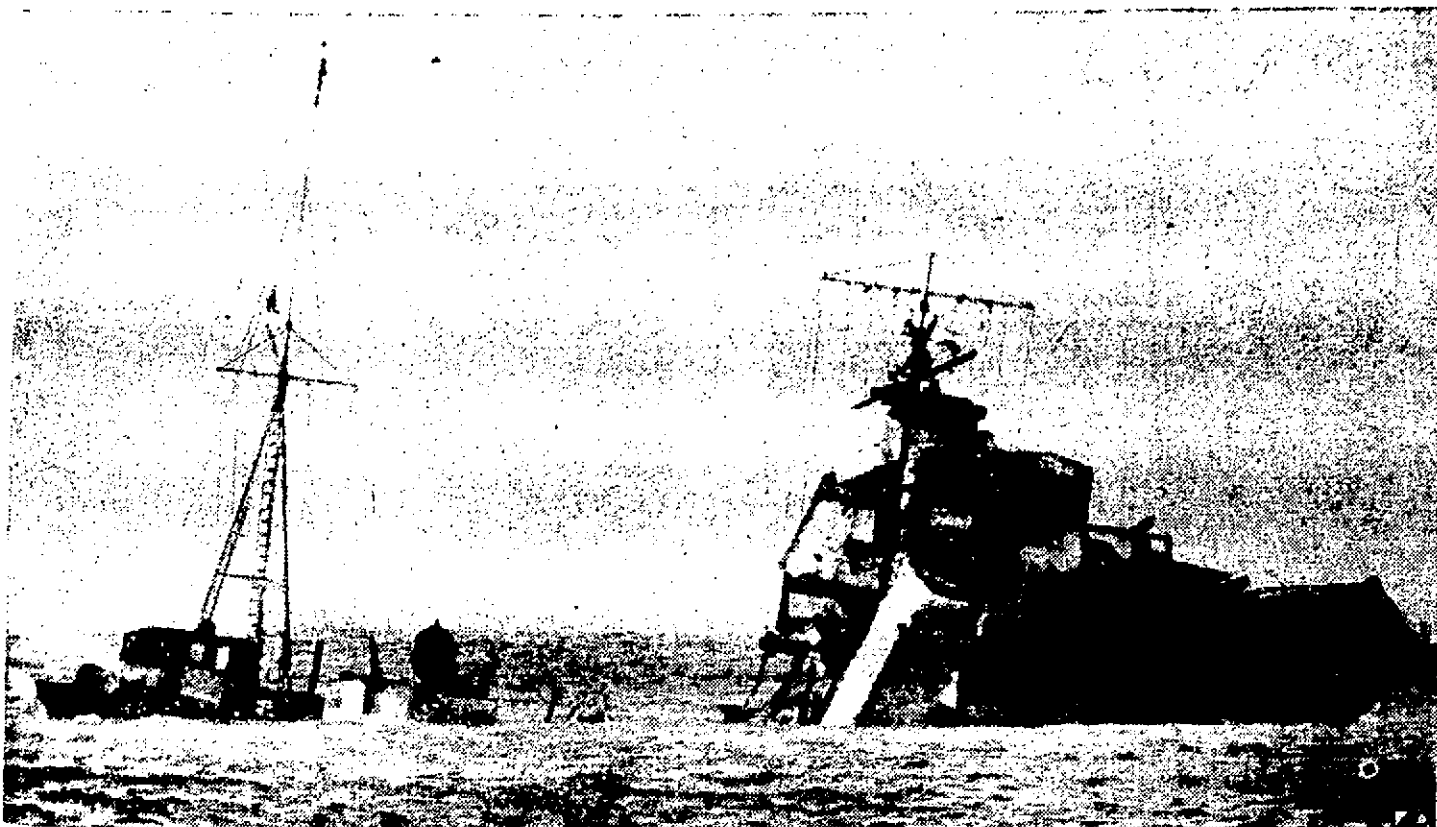

Without Pick or Shovel

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA. — Kenneth Bennett, a shopkeeper of Reswick, has given up golf for gold mining.

His mine is on a piece of land he owns just outside the town. Mining is only his hobby, he does not believe in making hard work of it and he has worked out the following system:

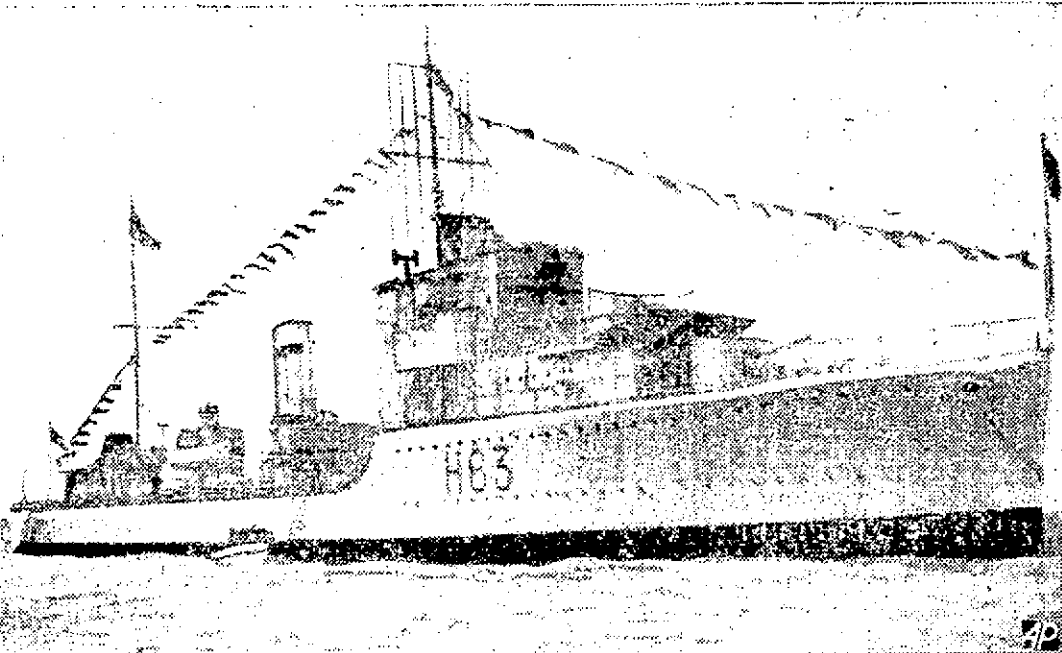

Go out to the mine, put a stick of dynamite in the bottom of it, climb it and wait for the bang, and climb again and pick up the pieces. No pick and shovel work about it. The other week he brought a nugget worth $250.

MINE BLAST DOWNS BRITISH DESTROYER

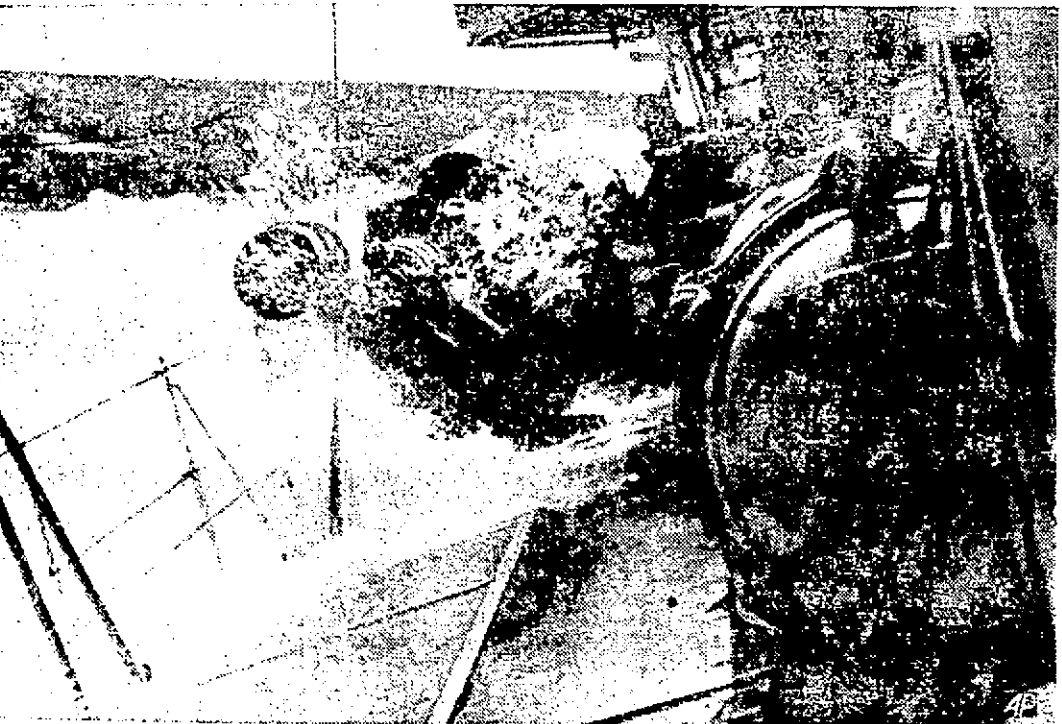

The British destroyer Gypsy was beached after striking a mine off the east coast of England and the twisted wreckage of the big fighting ship, half submerged, is shown in this picture radioed from London to New York. Forty men were missing and 21 injured. The Gypsy was the most important casualty of intensified warfare on the sea. Germans were reported sowing mine fields from the air.

BRITISH DESTROYER GYPSY STRIKES MINE

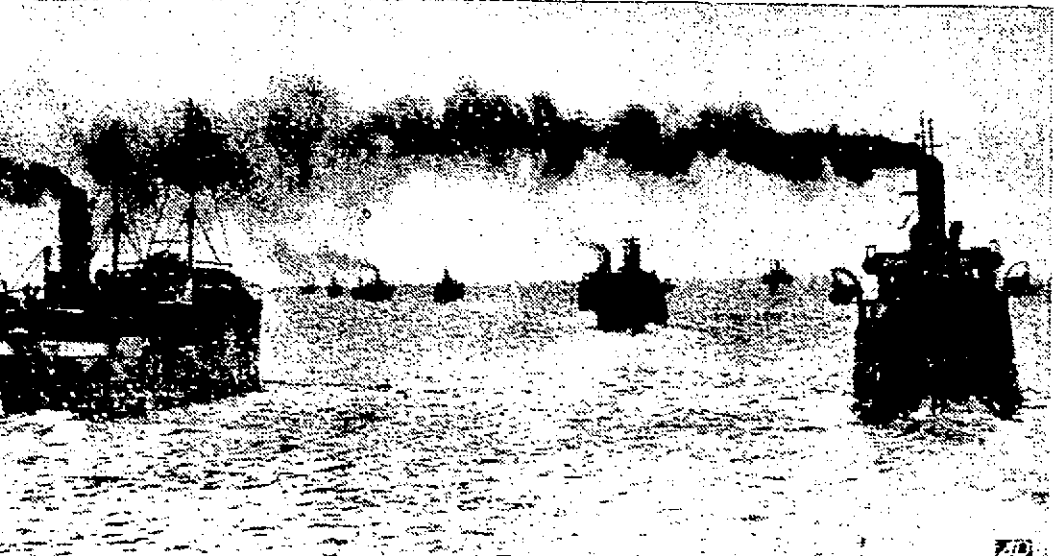

Great Britain disclosed the loss of the 1,335-ton destroyer Gypsy (above) which struck a mine off the east coast of England and had to be beached. The announcement said 21 officers and men were injured and 40 were missing of her normal complement of 145. The Gypsy was the seventh acknowledged loss of the British navy since the war began.

BRITAIN FIGHTS THE U-BOAT WITH DEPTH CHARGES

Slewed hard to port is this British destroyer as she dumps a depth charge into the sea in the campaign against Germany's attempted U-boat blockade. The charge, which looks like an oil barrel, contains enough explosive to damage a submarine several hundred yards away because the concussion of the blast is transmitted through the water with tremendous force. Some naval authorities speculated that Germany's resort to mines as a weapon might indicate Britain's depth charges had wiped out enough submarines to spoil the blockade.

CARGO BOATS MOVE TO ENGLAND UNDER THE NAVY'S WING

Stretching as far as the eye can reach are these ships of a British convoy and according to the caption passed by the British censor they are moving up one of the sea ways off the British coast, safe in the protection of the royal navy. The convoys are designed to see cargo boats safely through submarine-infested and mine-strewn waters so vital food and supplies can reach the British Isles.

Mr. Quelch has been an agent for a food products company for many years. Golden Krom, of Tubasco and Gus Lindgren, of this place, made a trip to New York Tuesday. Schools to Assist Local Committee In Sale of Seals

Schools will take an active part in the Christmas Seal campaign against tuberculosis which will open December 1 and continue through Christmas. A teaching unit on tuberculosis prevention, called "The Message of the Double-Barred Cross," has been distributed to city and county schools, it was announced yesterday.

This story on tuberculosis and its prevention and the part played by the double-barred cross, international badge of the drive against tuberculosis, is prepared in interesting form for use in grade and high schools," Joseph M. Fowler, president of the Ulster County Committee on Tuberculosis and Public Health, said yesterday. "It was prepared for the National Tuberculosis Association by W. W. Charters, Ph.D., director of the Bureau of Educational Research of Ohio State University.

"It is important to interest students in the tuberculosis campaign. They represent the group in which lies our greatest hope for control of the disease. By increasing our efforts in this group, breakdowns from tuberculosis may be averted."

A program of tuberculosis testing is carried on each year in the high schools of Kingston and Ulster county. A skin test is given all students whose parents request it. Those showing a positive reaction are fluoroscoped or X-rayed at the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital. Several institutions in the county also have this service.

This program is not only helpful in finding hidden cases of tuberculosis but has a great educational value to the student and his family.

Judge Goddard Signs Transfer

U. S. District Judge Henry W. Goddard on November 20 signed an order transferring all tax liens and the lien of any mortgage against the premises of the William Schwarzwald & Co., Inc., debtors, and substituting the proceeds of the recent auction sale. This action was taken in order that the needs of property bid in at the auction sale might be delivered to the persons who made the purchases.

The application to transfer the liens from the property to the proceeds of the sale was made on an order to show cause before Judge Goddard.

Granting of the application now makes it possible for the Schwarzwald Company to grant transfer of title to the purchasers of property at the auction sale which was conducted by Joseph P. Day Co., Inc. Deeds, several of which have been granted, are signed by the Schwarzwald company, debtors, as grantor.

They Made Ahavath Israel Ball a Success

Although the members of Ahavath Israel Congregation feel that the general public is responsible for the success of their third annual ball, commemorating the 37th anniversary of the founding of the religious body in Kingston, the quintet above stood out Thanksgiving eve at the Municipal Auditorium as the nucleus for the force that popularized the event and furnished a full evening for the 1,000 patrons. At the left is N. M. Abramson, manager of WOR entertainment bureau, Harry Hershfield, celebrated newspaper cartoonist and humorist who was master of ceremonies; H. G. Rafalowsky, president of Ahavath Israel; Michael S. Stravgate, general chairman of the ball and Bunny Berigan, radio band leader, whose orchestra furnished the music.

Fashion Commentator To Describe Revue

MISS ANN HERZOG

Miss Ann Herzog will take the part of the society reporter, Miss Trudy Snoops, in the Junior League revue, "Televisions of 1939," to be presented December 8 at the municipal auditorium. Miss Herzog as Miss Snoops will cover the many social affairs in conjunction with a marriage in the revue and will describe the many gowns worn by the socialites attending the affairs planned in honor of the bride.

In the wedding scene will be John Burgevin, as the groom; the bride, whose identity will remain unknown until later; Mrs. Gertrude Merrill, Miss Janet Betz, Mrs. N. LeVan Haver, Mrs. Paul Perlman, Mrs. William Fuller and Mrs. Julia Iliashenko, who will be the attendants.

In the final scene of the show, when the bride and groom are peacefully and happily settled in their new little home, all of their friends disturb the tranquility with a rousing skimmington. The setting of this scene is one of the features of the revue. A complete model kitchen will be reproduced on the stage through the cooperation of several Kingston stores.

The revue, full of fun as it will be, has a serious underlying purpose, as the proceeds will be used for the social service work of the organization. Tickets may be obtained from any league member or by telephoning 2771.

Grandfather Mountain Grandfather mountain, in North Carolina, was discovered by a French botanist, Andrew Michaux, who in 1794 scaled the peak and recorded this: "Climbed to the summit of the highest mountain of all North America, and with my companion and guide, sang the Marseillaise hymn, and cried: 'Long live America and the French Republic! Long Live Liberty!'" The Frenchman's exuberance was unwarranted, but the mountain, which is 5,964 feet high, probably was the highest mountain in America at one time. Geologists say it is one of the oldest mountains in the world, possibly more than 140,000,000 years old. It was created by a westward crumbling of the earth's surface. Subsequent erosion wore down the surrounding territory, leaving the igneous rock of Grandfather high above the valleys.

Good Taste Today

(Author of "Etiquette," "The Personalities of a House," "The Blue Book of Social Usage," etc.)

Meeting Visitors

Dear Mrs. Post: I live on the second floor of a two-family house. When I go down to open the door for some one, should I precede them up the stairs to my apartment or have them go first?

Answer: You would precede a man and follow a woman up your stairs. On the landing, of course, you may have to pass the woman in order to open the door to the apartment. If you do this, say "Excuse me."

Good Manners in the Schoolroom

Dear Mrs. Post: I am a school teacher. Should I rise when our supervisor, a man, comes in to my office to see me?

Answer: If you consider the supervisor a visitor and yourself a hostess, then of course you rise. But if you're working at your desk and he stops in on business, you should remain seated.

Don't Let This Happen to You

Dear Mrs. Post: I have done something I am afraid you will say is unforgivable! Last spring when I was visiting some people, I invited a girl I met there to go to a school dance with me this fall. She said yes—and asked when. I told her it would probably be the last week in September. And then I forgot all about it, and a week ago invited another girl to go with me. Then number one wrote me a note asking something about it—and I remembered that I had asked her, and here I am with two different girls invited to the same dance. What am I to do?

Answer: At first thought there seems nothing to do except have the grip, and go to bed. On second thought, a suggestion that might work very well, if you have a best friend who has no partner, is to make it a party of four and stay together all evening. You and the other boy together call for both girls. Just take it for granted that you have invited a foursome—but be sure you don't show any favoritism. Dance with one girl as much as you do with the other. Perhaps then they will never guess that you didn't intend it to be this way from the beginning. So far as I can think, it's either this or the grip!

Leaving a Used Guest Towel

Dear Mrs. Post: I am a young man and I never know just what to do with a guest towel after using it. Should it be folded and put back on the rack or laid on the wash basin?

Answer: You lay it partly folded—wherever is convenient. The reason you do not fold it carefully is that a used towel should not be mistaken for a fresh one by a next comer.

Ricksha, Oriental Gadget, Invented by American

The marines have staked out one more claim to fame by establishing the fact that the ricksha that furnishes a living for thousands of coolies in China, Japan and Singapore was the invention of a member of the corps.

It came about in this fashion, the corp official bulletin states:

Private Jonathan Goble, of the marine detachment on the U. S. S. Susquehanna, one of the ships in Commodore Perry's fleet which visited Japan in 1854, conceived the idea.

Goble had been a farmer in New York before he entered the marine corps in 1851 at the age of 24. He remained in the service four years.

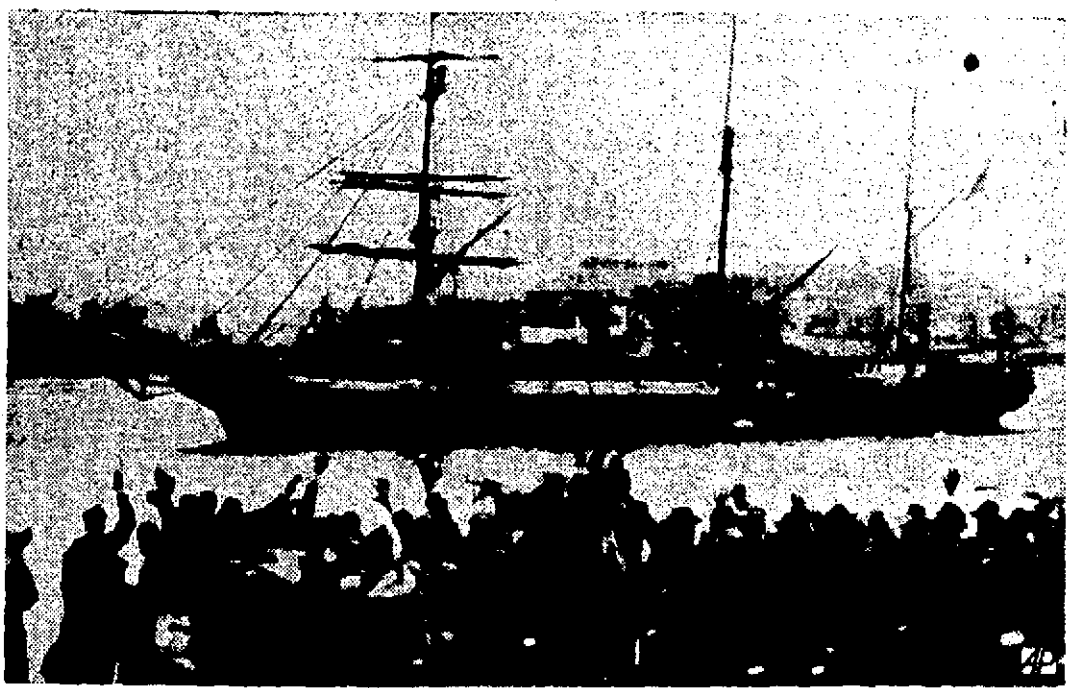

Just when Goble conceived his idea of the ginksha is not known, but after leaving the marine corps, and returning to Japan as a missionary, he suggested to the Japanese the idea of making these enlarged go-carts a means of conveyance.

The first ricksha, constructed as a result of his suggestion, made its appearance in Japan in 1867, and subsequently its use spread to nearly all the countries of the Far East.

New Zealand's Fungus

War has brought disaster to New Zealand's most unusual industry, it is said at Wellington. The Chinese are no longer buying large quantities of New Zealand's dried fungus for their vegetable soup. About seven years ago a Chinese, Chew Chong, who settled at New Plymouth, on the west coast of New Zealand, found that the special kind of fungus on stumps of trees was a marketable commodity in the home-land. He paid the settlers a cent a pound for dried fungus and shipped it to China. Later the price rose to seven and even eight cents a pound, and the industry prospered. Today the sale of fungus for China is at a low ebb.

BEAR STARTS ANTARCTIC VOYAGE IN SNOWSTORM

Heading out into a near gale at Boston, with snow flying past her masts, the old barkentine Bear departs on the first leg of a voyage to Antarctica, longest undertaken by the U. S. Navy with a sailing vessel since advent of steam. She will be companion ship to the motorship North Star in the government's first Antarctic expedition in a century.

Body of Resort Operator Is Found in Boathouse

Peekskill, N. Y., Nov. 24 (AP)—Beaten severely, the body of Harry Gorley was found yesterday in a boathouse on Lake Oswawanna near a Putnam county summer home he operated nine miles from here.

Local authorities said Gorley, about 50, had been killed by blows over the head with an ax or hammer. They said he apparently had been slain in front of the hotel, which had closed for the winter, and his body dragged 150 feet to the boathouse. The body was taken to Carmel.

State police declined to discuss the case pending completion of their investigation.

OFF FOR COLD, PERILOUS SEAS

Family farewells were the order of the day when the barkentine Bear sailed from Boston on the government's expedition to the South Pole regions. Hollis Richardson, of Franklin, N. H., who handles the expedition's dogs, is shown kissing his mother goodbye before the Bear headed out into a bitter North Atlantic snowstorm.

Dr. Vance Dies

Fire Marshal O. W. Raillard of Dalhart, Tex., believes in making fire drills realistic. Recently he had fire trucks driven silently to the school door and then suddenly opened up the fire siren. Firemen in helmets and rubber coats, bearing axes and dragging hose, dashed into the building. Some of the accustomed exits were blocked, simulating fire conditions. Despite all this excitement, 440 students got out of the building in two minutes, five seconds.

How Trees Spend the Winter

The following article was written by Mrs. Harry Pearson of High Falls for a meeting of the Ulster Garden Club.

"In one of the radio quizzes this summer the professor inquired: 'What is dendrology?' The lady questioned hesitated for a moment and then announced confidently, 'The study of dandruff.'"

"After the explanation that it was the study of trees, I was curious enough to hunt up the exact meaning and found it to be the botany of trees. Dendrology has three branches: first, tree physiology and pathology or the life processes of trees, in health and disease; second, tree anatomy and histology, the structure, (gross and minute) of trees; third, systematic botany, a study of the kind of trees in order to know them by name.

"My first impulse was to work out a simplified chart for recognizing trees readily, but as I considered it I changed to a subject I felt might be of even more interest to you: 'How Trees Spend the Winter.' What I would particularly like to do is to awaken your living interest in them. There are few people who do not thrill at the marvelous fall colors and I do not believe there is a more generally known song than Joyce Kilmer's 'Trees.'"

"But how much do you go beyond the enjoyment of them? There is no spot that is more indebted to trees than Ulster county and it seems to me particularly fitting that this club, dedicated to unselfish service, should pay back some of this debt.

"There is an old story of India in which an Indian prince sent his son to a wise man for instruction. The old man was seated under a tree and told the boy to break open a fruit which had fallen from the tree, asking, 'What do you find therein?' 'A nut,' was the reply. 'Now what do you see?' 'Nothing!'

"My child," said the old man, 'where you see nothing is hidden a great tree.'"

"They say nine out of ten people will see nothing of interest in a row of bare trees, and yet this is really the time to study them. 'A tree has vital organs corresponding to those of animals. Its living tissue is called cambium and is composed of plump little cells of protoplasm-semi-fluid in growing season. A tree is made up of annual concentric layers of wood around a central pith. It is completely covered with a close garment of bark, also made of annual layers.

"Between bark and wood is the delicate tissue, cambium, which, by cell multiplication, in the growing season, produces yearly addition of wood and bark.

"Buds are growing points set along twigs and, as a rule, produce leaf shoots. Leaves are extensions of cambium. They have been called the stomachs of a tree. They receive crude materials from soil and air and transmute them into starch, under the action of sunlight. This sap supplies the cambium cells during the growing season, and the excess of starch is stored away in every available space from bud to root-tip, from bark to pith.

"Leaves are also the lungs of the trees, for trees must breathe to live. The leaves throw off in insensible vapour, a vast quantity of water. This is called transpiration. (An average white oak throws off 150 gallons of water in a single summer day.)

"In the absence of leaves the bark carries on the work of respiration. It is porous, even where thickest. Looking at a twig you can see little raised dots on the smooth surface. These are lenticles, or breathing pores, a porous corky tissue that filters the air as it comes in.

"When leaves are just unfolding in the spring a bud will be formed in each angle between leaf and stem. During summer its bud is the especial charge of each particular leaf. If accident destroys the leaf the bud dies. By fall the tree withdraws, as much as possible, of the rich green leaf pulp, and stores it in the twig to feed the buds in the spring.

"A bud is a shoot in miniature. With care the scales can be stripped off and the leaf spread open showing its shape and venation. In a horse chestnut bud you will unpack a cluster of flowers distinct in number and parts. In the tulip tree but there is a single blossom, with petals, stamens and pistil clearly recognizable.

"The cambium cells have plenty of room for expansion and division. Freezing would rupture their walls and cause disintegration. Nature obviates this by withdrawing—by osmosis, this is the diffusion of fluids through membranes—the water of the protoplasm into spaces between the cells. The mucilaginous substance left behind is loosely enclosed by the crumpled cell wall. Thus a tree has almost as much water in it in winter as in summer. Green wood, cut in winter, burns slowly, oozes water, winter as well as summer.

"In cold weather a tree takes on the temperature of the surrounding air. The water in buds, trunk and cambium freezes solid. Ice crystals form in the intercellular spaces where they have ample room and so do no damage in alternate freezing and thawing.

"The protoplasm stiffens in excessive cold, but when the thermometer rises, life stirs again. When spring begins the warmth of the air awakens the buds. It thaws the ice crystals in the intercellular spaces and the cells quickly absorb the water. The thawing of the ground surrounds the roots with moisture and sap rises and flows to the farthest twig. If the tree is deceived by warm days, in January or February, the sudden change back to winter takes them by surprise and the plump cells are ruptured and killed by frost bite.

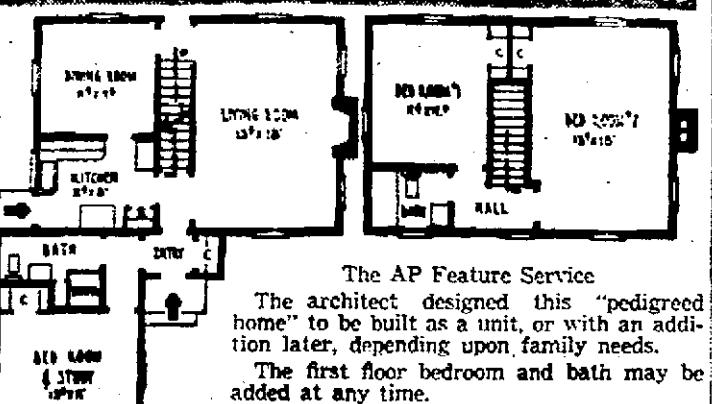

"It is unwise to plant a tender tree on the south side of the house as the buds are forced out too soon and late frosts cut them off. 'This winter try cutting some twigs of familiar trees—cherry, plum, apple, maple, elm. Cut them at least two feet long. Put them in a jar of water where they get the sun. Do not overcrowd them. Give them plenty of water. It is not necessary to change the water. Just cut the ends, slanting, under water, every few days and you have a chance to watch and study bud development. If you wait until spring you will find too many other things demanding attention.

"If you owned the only tree in Ulster county how you would prize it. I'm sure you would know its every characteristic and need. Just because we have such a marvelously generous supply don't let us be any less interested. Remember how China has suffered from her lack of knowledge of trees.

"Do you realize that only five years ago wild ducks faced extinction and that it was mainly through the efforts of two men that they have been saved? As yet, men do not shoot trees but there are plenty of other hunters striving to destroy them."

The architect designed this "pedigreed home" to be built as a unit, or with an addition later, depending upon family needs. The first floor bedroom and bath may be added at any time.
You can take your choice which entry shall be the main one, building the porch on either the front or back, or on the living room end of the house.
In Washington, D. C., this house would come in the $5,500 to $6,500 class with the first-floor bedroom and bath, but without the lot.
The Federal Home Loan Bank Board people will certify supervised construction, showing the house is "pedigreed," provided you follow their home building plan.

Fleigel's Long Field Beats Jersey Reds Last Night, 27-26

Colonials are Now Leading Loop With Percentage of .750

Colonial Center Clinches Victory With Record Deuce—1,000 Fans See Lots of Action

If President John J. O'Brien were as accurate in predicting weather as he was about last night's American Basketball League game, everybody could depend on the forecasts.

The 1,000 or so fans who climaxed their Thanksgiving holiday by attending the Colonial vs. Jersey Reds game at the municipal auditorium saw just what the league presy promised—one of the best holiday games ever played on the Broadway boards, with the Kingston team finishing victoriously, 27-26.

In advance notices, O'Brien went right out on the limb to say, "If this game isn't the best holiday skirmish Kingston has ever seen, then I'm mistaken," and he was right about the match which saw Bernie Fleigel finish as the hero, with credit for winning the game with his spectacular deuce and 11 points to lead all the scorers.

Fleigel not only gave Kingston the game with that field, which went into the books for distance (he threw it almost the length of the court) but put the Colonials right out in front as the league leaders with a standing of three wins, one loss and a percentage of .750 to top the Sphas who have a 4-2-.667 standing.

Reds Take Lead
That last period made up the most exciting 15 minutes of basketball ever on record locally. Going into this frame with a 20-18 point lead, the Colonials were shoved back on the short end by Eddie Benson's foul and deuce and from then on it was a real dog-fight full of good basketball that had the fans cheering.

Although the game was a real battle right from the start, furnishing colorful plays and excellent pass-work, the closing session packed in most of the thrills. After Benson's two shots, Chuck Reiser dashed down the floor and fairly leaped into the hoop with a field, showing the Green team out in front again by one, 23-21. Mike Jarmin tied it up with a deuce, and then Fleigel dumped in another two pointer to which Fitzpatrick added one point to give Barney Sedran's club a 25-23 margin.

Kingston called time with two minutes and 35 seconds left to play. Manager Sedran, realizing his boys had been idle since their last game at the auditorium, gave orders for them to settle down, and he chided Fleigel for his long-shot chances.

Fleigel Wins Game
Benny Kramer missed a foul as play resumed, and Danny Kaplowitz pumped in a field to knot the standing at 25 all and the fans went wild. Moe Spahn, once a scoring leader for the Reds, but who had been held to one field goal for a complimentary chance, and made good his try to put the Jersey club out in front, 26-25. Then there was a lapse in scoring as the clock ticked off the seconds. O'Brien missed from the free throw stripe, and then, with Paulie Adams cagers airtight on their defense near the basket, Fleigel disobeyed Manager Sedran's orders and heaved the winning field almost the length of the court to give Kingston the decision, 27-26.

As the big pivot man arched his shot, Sedran jumped off of the bench to burn it in, but as the calf-skin cut the cords he turned back shaking his head muttering to himself. The Reds got possession and were headed for what looked like another score, but the timer's horn ended the fray.

While Kingston was winning Wilkes-Barre put one over on Troy upstate, 40-37, to jump into third place in the league standing. Next week Troy comes to Kingston and the game probably will be played on Friday, December 1 instead of Tuesday.

Fleigel scored seven of his 11 points in the first period, which ended 15-8 in Kingston's favor. Tommy O'Brien, high man for the Reds, made five of his seven markers in this frame. In the second period the Sphas were held to five points, while the Jerseys with Kaplowitz, making four turned in 30 points. Fleigel added five to his score in the closing canto and Benson, three topped the efforts of the Reds who tallied seven to the Colonials' eight.

Fish eyes increase enormously in size proportionately with the depth until the limit of sunshine penetration is reached, which is about 200 fathoms below the surface. The bigger eyes enable the fish to utilize most effectively the smaller concentration of light below 200 fathoms and finally in the totally dark lower regions many sea creatures have no eyes whatsoever, depending upon feelers to guide them in their activities.

Newburgh Trims Kingston Before 7,000 Here, 12-0

With a last quarter splurge the Goldbacks of Newburgh put the finishing touches on their exclusive claim for the Hamilton Fish trophy, emblematic of league supremacy, yesterday afternoon at municipal stadium by turning back the outclassed Maroon and White gridders from Kingston High School to the tune of 12 to 0. An estimated crowd of 7,000 packed the stands and available standing room to break all previous attendance marks of DUSO League history.

Without then captain, Jack Fallon, the Kiamson put up a stubborn defense in the first two periods but fell prey to a sudden-death attempt of the Goldbacks in the last seconds of the first half. Then to make the score more impressive the Eldermen from the Hilly City rammed back with another six points in the final session to give them a well-earned triumph in the traditional Thanksgiving Day clash.

Although Kingston lost and thereby dropped its claim on the coveted crown, high school officials, fans and backers of the team will well remember the huge crowd which swarmed into the new stadium, with ideal weather conditions and a great gathering of rabid rooters, the 1939 edition of the Newburgh-Kingston series will go down into history.

Maroons Threaten
After knocking at Newburgh's front door in the waning minutes of the first period Kingston came back in the second session to drive to the eight-yard stripe. The rally was set up as Jay DeWitt, acting captain for the day, picked up Charlie Fornal's fumble on the Newburgh 21. From there the Maroon gridders bucked up to the eight but here the door closed as the Eldermen regained possession of the sphere as Fornal broke in to snatch Ennis' pass on the 15.

Goldbacks Score
From this point the Eldermen, paced by McCormack, Ronsini, Brown and Fornal, launched off on a well-sustained drive which saw them go to Kingston's 18. On fourth down, however, the Maroon team broke in and felled Fornal on the 18 to stop the threat. After Frank Tucker pounced on another Newburgh fumble Ashdown kicked to Newburgh's 46. Ronsini took it on an end sweep and raced 14 yards to the Kingston 11 to open up another rally. Two bucks by Fornal failed to pick up much yardage so Fornal on an attempted pass, pivoted and scampered far around his left end and with perfect blocking by his mates, found himself dived on by the Kingston 19. Then Charlie Fornal plowed to the 20 from where Newburgh finally cashed in with a touchdown.

Seconds were left on the watch as Newburgh went into formation. Walt Brown was in the tailback post and took the oval from George Manuche, his center. Brown quickly knifed through center, picked up momentum as he went along and finally went stumbling over the payoff dirt with Jack Gromoll hanging on his legs. But Brown just managed to spin over for the score. As Fornal's kick went wide to the side Newburgh led 6-0. This ended the second period. If the scoring play had been delayed just a second or two longer the score would have been missing from the game but the timer's watch told the story.

Another Threat
Kingston opened the third quarter with plenty of spirit and gusto and it looked as though the Maroon-clad warriors would at least tie the score, providing their attack kept on moving. After the kickoff McCormack booted to the Kingston 31 from which territory they packed their way to the 37. Then Jim Ashdown dropped back and lofted a pass out to Jack Short who caught it on the 50 and then legged it to the Newburgh 12. On a fake pass, following two unsuccessful power drives, Ashdown sped to the sidelines and galloped 12 yards to the visitors' 28. But necessary power was again missing from the picture as Newburgh regained possession on its 28.

The Kiamson, as the third period was near the close, made another threatening gesture in the direction of Newburgh's goal line but it was left stranded at the 36. Just as the period expired Frank Ronsini barged in and pocketed Johnny Ennis' pass on the Kingston 40. Ronsini was stopped on the 40 for no gain. Fornal then looped a shovel pass to Bob Ballweg who raced 21 yards to the 19. Ronsini plunged to the 14 for five. Drives by Ronsini and McCormack advanced the oval to the eight. On second down Ronsini, with beautiful blocking by Charlie Fornal and Frank McCormack, took to the right and went over the goal line standing up for Newburgh's second and final six pointer of the fracas.

Gromoll Runs 49
With a sure defeat hanging in front of them the Maroon gridders finally opened up their beleaguered bag of tricks after the score Kingston took the kickoff on the 19 and then advanced to the 20 on DeWitt's plunge. On the old statue of liberty play with a fake kick involved, Jack Gromoll, the Maroon sensation took the pigskin from Ashdown and dashed exactly 49 yards to Newburgh's 32. Hopper took Ashdown's pass to the 22. Another pass found Tucker getting it on the 12. The same story cropped up, however, as Newburgh held on the 11. Just as the period ended, the final period ended Newburgh was on its way again—after McCormack kicked Ashdown's heave on the 37, Charlie Fornal then took to the sidelines again with nifty blocking by Norm Denion and was finally brought down on the Maroon 19 as the game ended.

Press Box Jottings
According to Tom Yates, president of the DUSO League Sports Writers' Association, the estimated attendance of 7,000 has broken all DUSO marks to date. The grandstand was packed as were the bleacher ends of the gridiron. Plenty of spectators swarmed along the sidelines to make the vision of sideline markers just a little tough for the press. Speaking of the press we finally had our dream come true—that of having a real, honest to goodness press coop. It was a great help. As in past games this season Kingston was at a loss for different plays. There's too much of the same stuff all the time. On the other hand the Goldbacks smothered Kingston with an assortment of tricks. In all the Hilly City club accumulated 301 yards, but passing wasn't used much but considering all those yards gained by rushing they didn't need to try aerial work. A prospect for next

Saginaw Runner Makes New Record

Elizabeth, N. J., Nov. 24 (AP)—Eighteen-year-old Le Roy Schwartzkopf, Seton Hall Prep harrier from Saginaw, Mich., today ruled the interscholastic cross country world by virtue of a record smashing victory in the national championship race.

Schwartzkopf, wearing the colors of the South Orange, N. J., prep school, yesterday shattered the former meet record set by Leslie McMillan, New York scholastic star who captured the national intercollegiate title this week as a New York University sophomore.

The 135 pound Setonian's time over Warinanco Park's two and a half mile course was 12:48.9, seven seconds better than McMillan's mark set in 1937.

Schwartzkopf finished five yards ahead of Tony Passarelli of Millburn High School, New Jersey titleholder, while Ray Jordan of South High School, Akron, O., was third.

Eastwood High School of Syracuse, N. Y. captured the high school team championship with 80 points and Seton Hall was prep school winner with 67. Nott Terrace of Schenectady, N. Y., was second in high school division with 125 and St. Michael's and St. Aloysius, both Jersey City, tied for second in the prep school field with 501 points.

More Trout Caught Than Any Fish
Albany, N. Y., Nov. 24 (AP)—An average of 47 trout and lake trout went into the creel of each New York fisherman in 1937 for the largest total "take" of the species in a decade.

Of the 5,608,745 fish caught this year, the state conservation department said today, 1,248,834 were trout, a gain of 347,200 over 1936. Lake trout totaled 69,382, nearly 40,000 more than the previous year.

The catch was compiled from figures on license stubs turned in by fishermen when renewing their permits. Large increases were reported in the number of black bass, pickerel, pike, pike perch and whitefish taken, the department said, while the catch of muskellonge fell off $925 from the 1936 total of 20,015. Otsego whitefish decreased 4,307 from the previous year's catch of 10,434.

Meantime the department announced opening of the 1939-1940 "tip-up" fishing season on Saturday—ten days sooner than last year, to give fishermen the advantage of early freeze-ups in some sections.

The sport is permitted in most waters not inhabited by trout, with five tip-ups allowed each person except on Oneida and Chautauque Lakes and waters not wholly within the state where up to may 15 used.

Rookies May Be Army-Navy Heroes

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 24 (AP)—A skinny kid from Cleveland, who started the football season as a press-box "spotter," and an awkward Hercules from Wyoming, have a set-up chance to be story-book heroes of the Army-Navy game December 2.

Nobody except their mates on the Navy "B" squad ever heard of Boothe and Blount two months ago. They were so much grist for the Varsity practice mill.

Then, Tommy Blount, of Cleveland, drew a job "spotting" for the sports writers on Saturdays. He saw all the Varsity plays—and, too, he saw why they didn't work. On week-days, with the "B" squad, pass plays, the Varsity couldn't pull began to click when Tommy did the heaving.

Navy coaches began to sit up and take notice. Sammy Boothe was green but he learned fast. He found finally he could slap blockers down with a hefty paw and bear-hug ball-carriers to a fare-thee-well. The Wyoming giant wasn't fast, but he moved sort of majestically over tacklers when he did the ball-totting.

Finally, Coach Swede Larson, who doesn't muss much, made the move. His "Boothe and Blount work out with the Varsity" broke the "B" squad spell.

Blount's been the fair-haired boy ever since he started pitching those long-planned passes at Notre Dame. Boothe was the Navy spark plug against Penn and Columbia.

Next week, in the annual service classic, the "busy B" boys from the "B" squad get their big chance. Larson's planning his whole Tai offense around them.

Wappingers Falls Against Eagles

The basketball team from Wappingers Falls, which last year played here as Pine Island, will furnish opposition for the White Eagles in their Delaware avenue hall tonight in the regular weekly cage program.

Tonight's schedule is: White Eagles vs. Wappingers Falls at 8:30; Headquarters Battery, 156th Field Artillery, vs. Mary's Beauty Shop, 7:30. There will be a dance after the games.

Manager Frank Wojciechowski said today that he hoped to see his cagers come out on top in their battle with the team from down the river. "We beat this club last season when it represented Pine Island, but the score was close, 26-28, which means that the Polish lads will have to play their best brand of ball tonight."

The Eagles will use their regular lineup of Walt and Frank Tarzowski, Leo Buboltz, Tony Janisiewicz, Jeff Nalepa, Don Tucker, Lou Albright, Leo Komosa and Paul Argulewicz.

For the Artillery there will be Babe Larkin, Windrum, Nock, Ten Broeck, DeWitt, Liscom, Mcagher and Shoemaker.

VALIANT TERRAPINS PUSH FAVORED SYRACUSE TO WIN

Maryland University's Terrapins uncorked a passing game against Syracuse in their Thanksgiving Day game at College Park, Md., and here Richard Sheffer (31), Terrapin end, hugging an 18-year heave in the first quarter. He was dived in his tracks by the three Orange men bearing down on him—two of whom are Raymond Tice (11), Syracuse center, and Rodiek (49), Syracuse quarterback. Syracuse rallied to win by a field goal, 10-7.

Football Selections for College Games Saturday

By HERB BARKER

New York, Nov. 24 (AP)—Remembering the results of the last two weeks, this guesser will make the customary football tour on up-top and with small hope of avoiding hidden dynamite.

Penn-Cornell: By all the laws of the football guessers union, Cornell, unbeaten and untied, should be a cinch in this game. Penn, however, goes all out against the Big Red every year and Carl Snavely may have to use all of his tremendous man-power to get by.

The nod goes to Cornell.

Harvard-Yale: Under Dick Harlow, Harvard teams develop slowly but surely. Thus the Crimson's objective and this corner, for one, thinks Harvard will win.

Notre Dame-Southern California: The Irish collide with an unbeaten squad that can match Notre Dame man for man. Since its opening tie with Oregon, Southern California has run over everything in sight and gets this vote.

Michigan-Ohio State: With Evanshewski back and Harmon running wild, this becomes one of the toughest games on the slate to "expert." We'll take Ohio State which can clinch the Big Ten title here.

U. C. L. A.-Oregon State: Just as indigestible and just as dangerous. State is plenty tough but we'll take U. C. L. A. and Kenny Washington.

Baylor-Southern Methodist: Nobody has explained what happened to S. M. U. against Arkansas last week. The Mustangs may come roaring back but erratic Baylor is the choice.

Low-Northwestern: One of the season's most sensational teams against disappointing Northwestern. Possibly this is the place where the Hawkeyes and Nile Kinnick will fold but the records point to Iowa and this corner, finally convinced, tags along with Kinnick and company.

Penn State-Pitt: The Nittany Lions are coming along but Pitt has played the tougher schedule and gets the call.

Princeton-Navy: The Tigers will find it hard to get by this but we'll risk that Princeton.

Manhattan-Villanova: Must pick Villanova.

Columbia-Colgate: Columbia must be about the best team that ever won only one major game. Maybe this will be No. 2. Columbia.

Carnegie-Duquesne: Duquesne's sophomores have made no serious mistakes yet. Duquesne.

George Washington-Bucknell: Probably close. George Washington.

Boston College-Kansas State: State slipped off the rails against Iowa State last week. Boston College.

Wisconsin-Minnesota: Looks safe for Minnesota.

Purdue-Indiana: Quick. Mortimer, my hat Purdue.

Chicago-Illinois: Chicago could use some of the 25 points the Maroons scored last week. Illinois.

Nebraska-Oklahoma: Ready to duck on this one. Oklahoma.

Michigan State-Temple: If Temple has a scoring punch the Owls have successfully concealed it thus far. Michigan State.

Clemson-Furman: Furman's got a good club but seems over-

Junior Cage Loop Will Be Formed

The organization of a Junior City Basketball League for boys under 17 years of age is on the slate of activities listed for tomorrow's recreation program at the municipal auditorium.

With nine teams already entered in the tentative league set-up, a meeting has been called for making final arrangements for league play and to afford other teams an opportunity to join. The meeting will be held at the municipal auditorium at 1:30 tomorrow, and all managers of junior teams are invited by the department of recreation to be in attendance.

This will be the third successive year that a junior basketball league has been sponsored by the local recreation department as part of the regular program of indoor recreation at the municipal auditorium on Saturdays. Many of the players of the first two leagues are now in the regular City League.

In addition to the organization of the Junior Basketball League, many other activities are planned for the auditorium program which begins at 10 a. m. and continues to 5 p. m. Last week found 321 boys taking advantage of these activities and as many are expected again tomorrow.

In case they knew, the spokesman continued, the explosion was "either to inflame hatred against the British or whip up the German people's waning enthusiasm for Hitler."

The spokesman did not reveal the nature of the purported peace proposal or from what German faction it was supposed to have come. He said the British believe Stevens and Best, from German reports, are now in Berlin.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—Stocks suffered a spill in today's market after an early attempt to rally the list failed to arouse any real enthusiasm.

While offerings were relatively small, losses of 1 to 4 points predominated for steels, motors and aircrafts near the final hour. Minor declines elsewhere were the rule. Transfers were at the rate of approximately 800,000 shares.

Until after noon, setbacks were in minor fractions for the most part, with scattered gains in evidence for special favorites.

The slump followed the President's press conference at Warm Springs in which he indicated some consideration was being given to the matter of taxes to raise around $500,000,000 for defense purposes. He stressed, at the same time, that nothing had been decided upon.

Principal losers included Chrysler, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Douglas Aircraft, International Harvester, General Motors and North American Aviation.

Some customers added light commitments in issues here and there that were buoyed by boosted dividends and bright earnings statements. The tendency, though, was to ignore the continued flow of good business and industrial news and try to find the answer to what's the matter with the market.

The European war again was a negligible factor. Bonds and commodities emulated stocks to a greater or lesser degree. Foreign securities markets were fairly steady.

Bid up now and then in the curb were Lockheed, Electric Bond & Share, American Cyanamid "B" and Neli Corp. Hesitant were Lake Shore, Creole Petroleum and Pittsburgh Plate Glass.

Alleged Slayer Caught

Chicago, Nov. 24 (AP).—Trapped in an attic hideout, a wounded negro was held by the police today as the confederated slayer of Vito Addante, a grocer shot to death in the presence of his family during a holdup a week ago. Assistant State's Attorney Alexander Napoli said the man, Oscar Bragg, 35, confessed soon after his arrest yesterday afternoon. He was taken to the police hospital on a stretcher, having suffered four wounds.

The 13-year-old Pasquale, who was identified by Bragg as the robber he fired at after picking up his father's fallen pistol, told the negro, Prosecutor Napoli said, told him he was crazed with narcotics when the fatal shooting occurred.

Glancing over the city ordinances, Police Chief W. C. Linville, Atchison, Kas., came across the old, almost forgotten, curfew law. He revived it for the Halloween period because "there's been too much devilry." The curfew ordinance says all children shall be at home by 9 p. m.

Market Still Ignores Helpful Business News

In Wednesday's trading, before the holiday with volume at 570,000 shares, the Dow-Jones stock averages again showed losses, although not large. Industrial issues, closing slightly above the lows of the day had a net loss of .64 point, to 150.34; rails were off .02, to 25.58. The market continued to ignore favorable business news, but on the other hand there appears to be little, of immediate importance, at least, to favor a bearish attitude.

Commodities held steady, with particular strength in rubber futures, which have climbed more than half a cent a pound since the beginning of the week. Wheat prices tended lower in Chicago and cotton closed with losses of two to nine points. Trading in cotton at Liverpool Thursday was active and deliveries showed losses of 15 to 20 points.

The Bureau of Labor Index of wholesale prices declined two points, to 79.1 per cent of the 1926-27 average, in the week ended November 18.

The Federal Security Employment Agency reports that it placed 308,400 persons in private jobs in October.

Portugal will buy from the U. S. 12 two-motored bombing planes for the Portuguese navy, at a cost of $75,000 each.

Class 1 railroads in September had net income after taxes and fixed charges, of $41,078,000, compared with net of $6,395,000 in the same month last year. In October the first eight roads to report show a gain for the month over last year of 30.5 per cent.

The electric light and power industry in the U. S. during the week ended November 18 had production of 2,514,350,000 kwh, an increase of 10.7 per cent over the like week in 1938.

Based upon an estimate of 1938 income, employees of General Electric Co. will receive this year approximately $2,400,000 as distribution under the company's profit-sharing plan, according to President Gerard Swope. In 1938 the distribution was $557,000. In addition the employees will have received approximately $2,350,000 as a cost-of-living adjustment this year.

Allegheny Steel declared a year-end dividend of 50 cents on common stock, first payment on common since the merger of Allegheny and Ludlum in August, 1938.

American Cyanamid declares special of $1 on Class A and B common, payable in preferred stock; also declared 15 cents quarterly on Class A and B common and a quarterly of 12 1/2 cents on the five per cent cumulative preferred. Lehigh Coal and Navigation declared a dividend of ten cents. Anacoda Copper pays 50 cents, making a total of $1.25 for the year against 50 cents in 1938. Chile Copper pays 50 cents, making $2.50 for the year. Greene Cananea Corp. pays 50 cents, making $3 for the year. Inland Steel announced a special of $1.50, bringing total payments for the year to $4. Bannock & Aristook R. took no action on common, but regular dividend of $1.25 on preferred was declared. The company has paid $2.37 on common during 1939.

Congoleum-Nairn declared an extra of 50 cents; directors also voted a wage dividend to employees, aggregating over $100,000.

Reports show that automobile difficulties are having the heaviest final quarter in two years. Unfilled orders are at a high level, with most plants reporting that they are two to six weeks behind on orders. Even without Chrysler output resuming final quarter sales will approximate the 1,063,956 cars sold during the last quarter of 1938.

West Side Group Names Chairman At Middletown

Temporary Chairman Charles Evans of the Orange County Planning Board and Temporary Secretary Spencer T. Horton of the Orange County Chamber of Commerce were unanimously elected permanently to the posts at the second meeting of the west side of the Hudson river regional association, which held its second meeting in Mitchell Inn, Middletown, Tuesday afternoon.

Mayor C. J. Heiselman, who called the first meeting which was held in Kingston at the Stuyvesant Hotel as the guests of Hamilton Laurie of the hotel, was chosen vice-president of the association, which is still without an official name.

The meeting held in Middletown was marked with increasing enthusiasm and widening objectives. Fully a score of towns, as at the initial meeting in Kingston early in October, were represented Tuesday, the territory embracing the entire west shore from the New Jersey line to and including Albany and extending westward to the Delaware and Susquehanna rivers.

Three directors have been assigned to each of the nine counties making up the region. Orange, the most numerous represented at the meeting, was the only county to complete its directorate.

Something of a surprise was occasioned by the presence of Claude J. Holding, of Albany, president of the Martin Van Buren Highway Association, the organization of which in September to boost the east shore interests had much to do with Mayor Heiselman starting a movement for a west shore organization.

Mr. Holding, who with Townsend Brown, also represented the Albany Automobile Club, offered the suggestion that the two shores compose any differences they may have and work together for the best interests of all.

Preliminary to selection of directors for other counties, a chairman was named for each county—Albert Kurdt for Ulster, Frank Manthey for Rockland, Max J. Hermann for Delaware, and Edward Henderson for Greene. Otsego, Schoharie and Sullivan chairmen are also to be named immediately.

Next Meeting December 15

County chairmen are to contact trade and civic organizations for completion of directorates not later than Friday, December 15, when the next meeting is to be held in Catskill. It is the association's purpose to alternate meetings all through the region. Meanwhile the various counties are to make suggestions for a name, which is to be as brief and inclusive as possible.

One suggestion, mentioned by Chairman Evans, is Building Ruzzo Bought

The former Byer building at 259 Fair street was sold to Sisto Ruzzo on Monday afternoon at the court house by Charles de la Vergne, as trustee in bankruptcy. Mr. Ruzzo's bid was $14,125. The building houses the former Byer cigar store which has been closed for some time since financial difficulties made it necessary for Joseph Byer to close the store which for many years had been operated by his father, Frank Byer.

Arthur Bodanzky, Opera Conductor, Dies in New York

New York, Nov. 24 (AP)—Arthur Bodanzky, for 24 years conductor of the Metropolitan opera association, died yesterday at 61.

The slender, be-spectacled, conductor, a foremost interpreter of Wagnerian music, died in a hospital after a heart attack. He was a native of Vienna.

A severe case of arthritis that developed after he had returned here from a summer vacation in Vermont had forced Bodanzky to cancel his plans to begin his 25th year with the Metropolitan, which opens its opera season next Monday night.

Private funeral services will be held today. His widow and a daughter, Mrs. William Muschenheim, survive.

Chinchilla Feeding Habits
Chinchillas do practically all their eating early in the evening and during the night. In captivity, therefore, they are usually fed once daily, late in the afternoon. Fresh water should be available to them at all times. Their ordinary food consists mainly of vegetable matter. They are fond of rolled oats, rolled wheat, dried bread, whole corn and wheat-germ meal. They will thrive on these grain foods if an abundance of green food also is given, such as alfalfa hay, lettuce and lawn clippings.

Sinus Operations Are Curing Many Blindness Cases

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 24 (AP)—Sinus operations, greatly feared by many sufferers from sinus trouble, are curing many cases of blindness.

The dramatic results of draining the sinuses far back in the head occur when there has been interference between them and the optic nerve due to infection. Dr. James B. Costen of St. Louis, Mo., told members of the Southern Medical Association at one of its closing sessions today.

In a series of 13 cases studied, both sudden blindness and progressive blindness were found, with some patients reporting spots before their eyes, blurring, bleeding from the nose, tonsil infections, and headaches.

Drainage or flushing of the remote sinuses in the middle of the head brought about a complete or partial improvement in ten of the 13 cases. Dr. Costen declared, the operations relieving both pressure on the optic nerve and infection of the sinuses.

In another report Dr. T. W. Moore of Huntington, W. Va., declared that proper diet is probably the most important factor in preventing cataracts, or cloudiness of the eyes.
